Nearly 180 days after the en-regulation governing the new law that would allow those affected to start applying for CNMI residency.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security is required to come up with those regulations but, according to Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (Ind-MP), that

The number of visitors from China continues to decline in the CNMI and that is starting to worry Marianas Visitors Authority board chair Marian Aldan-Pierce, who suggested exploring other source markets for tourists.

At the same time, Aldan-Pierce laments that many of the factors affecting the CNMI's visitor arrivals are beyond the CNMI's control, such as the ongoing Hong Kong protests that is creating a bottleneck for tourists teach the younger members of the community the different species of fish, as well as spearfishing.

DFW Fisheries supervisor Mike Tenorio said what they are trying to teach goes beyond the experience of catching a fish into understanding the behavior of the fish itself.

"...You need to understand how the fish behaves, what do they do, where are they at, when are their peak seasons. This builds to the person's understanding of how to harvest and when to harvest and when not to harvest," he said

Members of the Youth Fishing Club of the Saipan Fishermen's Association were shown the different species of fish found in the Marianas, and were taught the markers that would help them identify the fish easily, as well as information on where the fish are usually found.

Tenorio, who himself started fishing as a young boy by going with his relatives when they went fishing, still fishes these days, but more for research.

life history study," Tenorio explained. "We go out and we sample certain targeted food fish species to understand the reproductive cycle—their age and maturity and at what point in their life or age do they become reproductively mature. From that, we use to try to manage the resources that are being sold in the market."

Aside from fish species, DFW also talked about spearfishing, some of its dangers, what to expect, and how to avoid those dangers.

"Nowadays, there's a lot of media experiencing [and showing] spearfishing," Tenorio said. "But getting out and doing it yourself, getting out into the world and seeing things for yourself helps in ground truthing. Experiencing it is different from seeing it on TV. It is a healthy way of life, it's a way of understanding your resources."

The DFW has been a part of the SFA's outreach program since June, to talk about the fish species in the Marianas, which the batch of new young fishermen should know before they head out to the open ocean.

Set to run for eight months, the SFA Youth Fishing program supports SFA's vision to give the youth an understanding of ocean preservation and the fishery industry in the CNMI. For more information, visit SFA at <https://www.facebook.com/sfacnmi/>.

BOE's Ada: Lifting austerity at PSS is suicide

By MARC A. VENUS
marc_venus@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Former Board of Education chair MaryLou Ada believes that lifting the ongoing austerity measures at the Public School System would be "suicide."

Speaking at yesterday's BOE meeting on Capital Hill, Ada, who also chairs the BOE's Fiscal, Personnel, and Administration Committee, said the repercussions PSS currently face after Super Typhoon Yutu in October 2018 are too strenuous for the system and lifting the austerity measures is too risky.

She told the board that the FPA committee met with PSS officials last Wednesday to discuss lifting the austerity measures but they ultimately decided to put off deciding on the matter.

Ada said the repairs on several PSS schools damaged from Super Typhoon Yutu must be dealt with, as she previously requested PSS officials to get schools out of double sessions by January 2020.

"If we were to lift austerity measures, we need to consider other expenses like operations, utilities, gas, repairs, and many more. ... This would increase our debt and if we could find a funding source, then we can discuss lifting [the austerity measures]," she said.

The board later took no action on the matter.

Ada said the board should take no action right now, because the FPA must get more information from PSS about its other options in order to lift the austerity measures.

Interim Budget and Finance director Kimo Rosario earlier said that PSS needs a bare minimum of $42 million in order to run operations. Right now, PSS is budgeted for $37.7 million for fiscal year 2020. This amount is the projected 25% that PSS will receive from the central government, as mandated by the CNMI Constitution.

He said PSS has implemented a 15% operational budget cuts in certain schools in order to balance out operation budgets on smaller PSS schools. Rosario added that lifting austerity measures without sufficient funding will put PSS under $6 million to $7 million worth of debt by the end of fiscal year 2020.

Newly installed Education Commissioner Dr. Alfred Ada noted that lifting austerity is risky at this moment, since PSS just got out of its debt from outside vendors prior to his appointment. He said PSS should consider "dealing with the present" issues PSS is undergoing, that being the repairs of school facilities in order to return schools to full sessions.

He added that PSS and the board must understand that sustainable funding does not favor the lifting of austerity measures right now. "We don't have money right now, we must understand that we need to use the money we have now for what we can spend sparingly," he said.

PSS is currently running a 72-hour work week.

Over 70 participate in Chamber's Career Exploration Day

By MARC A. VENUS
marc_venus@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Over 70 students participated in last Wednesday's Saipan Chamber of Commerce Career Exploration Day. The students, coming from all high schools throughout Saipan, were paired with over 30 Chamber member-businesses and were exposed to hands-on experience similar to the traditional job shadowing process.

Later that day, the students were recognized by the Chamber during its general membership meeting at the Saipan World Resort's Royal Taga Hall, during which both Labor Secretary Vicky Benavente and Northern Marianas Trades Institute CEO Agnes McPhetres spoke about the event's importance.

Benavente focused on the importance of getting these students into the workforce quickly and effectively before the CNMI's foreign worker program, called the CW program, expires in 2029, as mandated by law.

She said that the uncertainty of the CW program's ending gave businesses in the CNMI a major scare, since majority of employees were under the CW program and the extension gave more time for the CNMI to invest in its youth to get them into the workforce.

"Working with the trades industry is DOL's current priorities since the trades industry is the most requested workforce in the CNMI," Benavente said. She added that the end of October 2019 saw over 11,000 job vacancy announcements posted on the DOL website.

McPhetres, on the other hand, said students should be open to the idea of investing in the trades industry, since college is not the only option available to them.

McPhetres said NMTI has been working closely with CNMI DOL through the Apprenticeship Program, which allows students to work as apprentices in the trades industry to prepare them with the proper certification as soon as they complete an apprenticeship program.

She said NMTI has been working with PSS on the hotel and restaurant trades program, as she mentioned that NMTI and Da'Ok Academy are currently holding classes with one another. Da'Ok Academy is currently stationed at the NMTI campus in Lower Base.

Shortly after the Chamber meeting, the participants were exposed to workshops on how to go through job interviews, how to save for the future, and other presentations that will help them once they graduate high school.

BOE OK's payment to NMHC

By MARC A. VENUS
marc_venus@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Board of Education has approved to pay the Northern Marianas Housing Corp. over $96,000 in a move that would make the Public School System eligible for assistance under the Community Development Block Grant program.

PSS acting Finance and Budget director Kimo Rosario told the board in their meeting last month that PSS should prioritize paying its debt with NMHC, as the CDBG's Disaster Recovery program can help PSS with its funding issues on repairs for its schools.

This debt of over $96,000 was accrued because PSS did not return the grant funding it received for at least three major school projects that were never implemented or lacked proper documentation. These projects were the Marianas High School's collateral equipment, the proposed swimming pool project at the Saipan Southern High School, and the library extension of Gregorio T. Camacho Elementary School.

With this payment, PSS will be eligible to receive funding from the CDBG-DR. However, this payment does not guarantee that PSS will get the money but PSS has already sent applications and proposal to NMHC. Rosario said Gov. Ralph DLG previously assured that PSS will be approved under the CDBG-DR program, as NMHC will be managing the CDBG-DR funds for the recovery projects.

And although PSS may receive this funding, the CDBG-DR program funding will only cover a portion of the costs of repairs, Rosario said. "For example, if the Hopwood [Middle School] repairs costs $24 million, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency covers $10 million, the CDBG-DR funding will cover the remaining $14 million," he said during the BOE's special meeting yesterday.

Education Commissioner Dr. Alfred Ada agreed with Rosario's initiative to get the debt dealt with, as the CDBG-DR program will open doors for PSS to be able to begin and complete its projects to not only repair but expand its schools.

PSS is slated to receive over $700,000 worth of reimbursements from FEMA and Ada said that getting the CDBG-DR funding will boost the process of getting PSS back up and running.

The CDBG-DR program is under the U.S. Housing and Urban Development. HUD announced on Tuesday that the CNMI will be getting over $243 million for recovery funding from Super Typhoon Yutu, which hit Saipan and Tinian on October 2018.

fice and is moving to the U.S. mainland.

The former judge is leaving the Commonwealth on Dec. 16. He will be moving to the vicinity of Seattle, Washington.

For Bellas, more important than his many professional accomplishments, is that he lived on Saipan longer than anywhere else in his life.

Bellas said he loves the islands not just because of their beauty, but also because they have been his home.

He has a daughter and now a grandson who was born on the island.

"I have made so many close friends here and it will be very hard to not see them every day. I am part of this community and it is part of me," he said.

Bellas said he knows that people come and go through the Commonwealth, but that he would like to think that each person leaves behind some contribution.

As a lawyer, Bellas said he has tried to help other people; as a judge, to bring justice to those who need it; and as a member of the community, to give more than he has received.

He was a special judge and then associate judge of the CNMI Superior Court.

Bellas has served as a justice and judge pro tem of the CNMI Supreme and Superior Court since 2002.

He has been president of the CNMI Bar Association and chaired the CNMI Bar Association Disciplinary Committee for more than 10 years.

He was an assistant attorney general, registrar at the Registrar of Corporations, deputy legal counsel for the 4th House of Representatives, and the first chief legal counsel of the Legislative Bureau.

Bellas also worked for the U.S. Department of Justice as a staff attorney for the U.S. Trustee's Office for Guam and the CNMI.

He chaired the Garment Oversight Board from 2003 to 2008.

Bellas said it will not be easy leaving but he is hoping that he will get to come back occasionally.

has yet to happen.

This legislation, now known as Public Law 116-24, affects a total of 1,039 parolees who received long-term humanitarian parole.

"...[Acting] secretary of Homeland Security [Chad Wolf] was legally required to have issued regulations by this week. He has not," Sablan told Saipan Tribune when asked for updates on the regulations.

P.L. 116-24, among other things, mandates the Department of Homeland Security to come up within six months, or 180 days, the step-by-step process of how aliens who are eligible to apply for CNMI-only resident status could start the process for applying for that status. The bill was enacted on June 26, 2019. That means DHS has up to the end of December to come out with the regulations.

P.L. 116-24 took almost five months of efforts to pass the U.S. Congress and enacted by Trump.

P.L. 116-24 applies to all immediate relatives of U.S. citizens and other stateless individuals, CNMI permanent residents and their IRs, IRs of citizens of Freely Associated States (the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Republic of Palau), and certain in-home caregivers of CNMI residents.

Sablan introduced the legislation last Jan. 15 and it passed the U.S. House of Representatives on June 3, 2019. The Senate passed it on June 24, 2019, and was enacted by Trump two days later.

Itos Feliciano, one of the 1,039 parolees, told Saipan Tribune in an interview that although he remains unworried, he would prefer to have the regulations sooner than later.

Feliciano told Saipan Tri- bune that he had successfully applied for a re-parole, which would be valid until mid-2020, but the main kicker is that applying for an Employment Authorization Document, was a bit pricey.

"We pay for the EAD and when the regulations come out, we would then have to pay for the residency fees. We'd have to pay more than we need to," he said.

According to Feliciano, he had to pay $498 for an EAD.

"That is our permission to work. If the new residency regulations come out and the EAD is still valid for several months, then it's a waste of money," he added.

stay home on Thursday and Friday and shut down roads to nonessential vehicles as teams began going door-to-door to administer vaccines.

Families in the Pacific island nation were asked to hang red flags from their houses if they needed to be vaccinated.

Most of those who have died from the virus are young, with 54 deaths among children aged 4 or younger.

The Samoa Observer newspaper said the normally bustling capital Apia was a ghost town on Thursday, with only birds nesting in the rooftops and stray dogs roaming the streets.

Prime Minister Tuilaepa Sailele Malielegaoi told reporters the vaccine drive was unprecedented in the nation's history.

He said one challenge was that a lot of people hadn't considered that measles could be deadly.

"They seem to take a kind of lackadaisical attitude to all the warnings that we had issued through the television and also through the radio," he said.

Another challenge, he said,

CHINA

flights from Shanghai and two charter flights from Guangzhou starting last Dec. 2.

Of particular concern for the MVA is that the number of visitors from the People's Republic of China keeps declining. "What we understand is that there's a lot of external factors that's way beyond our control," Aldan-Pierce said, adding that MVA may need to look for opportunities elsewhere other than just the China market.

Another concern is the suspension of flights from Hong Kong since last week due to ongoing protests. Aldan-Pierce said that, on a bigger scale, the ongoing Hong Kong protest is part of the reason why the inbound numbers from China continues to decline. She pointed out that some of the CNMI's visitors are actually from southern China and go through Hong Kong before coming here.

"[The protests] prevent people from going into Hong Kong to get those flights," Aldan-Pierce said.

As for a recent letter to the editor of a woman traveling through Hong Kong who was that others had been seeking help from traditional healers, who had been successfully treating tropical diseases in Samoa for some 4,000 years.

"Some of our people pay a visit to traditional healers thinking that measles is a typical tropical disease, which it is not," the prime minister said.

Samoa authorities believe the virus was first spread by a traveler from New Zealand.

The nation declared a national emergency last month and mandated that all 200,000 people get vaccinated. The government has also closed all schools and banned children from public gatherings.

According to the government, more than 4,000 people have contracted the disease since the outbreak began and 172 people remain in hospitals, including 19 children in critical condition.

Figures from the World Health Organization and UNICEF indicate that fewer than 30% of Samoan infants were immunized last year. That low rate was exacerbated by a medical mishap that killed two babies who were administered a vaccine that had been incorrectly mixed, causing wider delays and distrust in the vaccination program.

claimed that she was made to undergo a pregnancy test, Aldan-Pierce said they asked MVA managing director Priscilla M. Iakopo to reach out to the airline to find out more about that issue.

Aldan-Pierce said they have never heard of anything like that. "It's a horrible invasion of privacy," she said.

The chairwoman said they just want to find out more about it and hopefully "prevent other people from having to go through what this poor lady went [through] unnecessarily."

Aldan-Pierce informed Iakopo at the last board meeting that they just learned about the incident that apparently happened in Hong Kong where a passenger was told to take an invasive pregnancy test.

The chairwoman said they would like to reach out to the airlines to find more about the incident so they can prevent this from happening again. The letter writer had said that she was made to undergo the pregnancy test by staff of Hong Kong Express.

Aldan-Pierce instructed Iakopo to meet with Hong Kong Express and discuss the matter.

"Just a way that it will not happen to anybody again," she said.

MVA to solicit bids to create Zen garden

The Marianas Visitors Authority's board of directors has approved the issuance of an invitation to bid to transform the Japanese Peace Memorial at the Banzai Cliff in Marpi into a tranquil Zen garden.

The project is estimated to cost between $950,000 and $1.2 million.

At the MVA board's meeting Wednesday, MVA managing director Priscilla M. Iakopo asked the directors to approve the announcement of an invitation to bid so they can solicit proposals for the project already. Iakopo said they have already the design and the scope of work.

When asked how much the project is going to cost MVA, Iakopo said, "We don't know how much exactly the amount would be. Obviously, we're hoping that we stay within budget."

When MVA director Chris Nelson reiterated his question about the estimated cost, MVA destination enhancement specialist Tatiana Babauta disclosed that it is estimated to cost from $950,000 to $1.2 million.

MVA chair Marian Aldan-Pierce said the project includes the realignment of the road, the pavement of the scenic area, and then landscaping. The existing restroom and the pavilion will remain there.

Aldan-Pierce said if the board approves the invitation to bid, it does not mean that MVA is committed to the project. She said the board can decide later whether or not they are going to move forward with the construction.

Iakopo suggested that it would be best to put a language in the announcement that the project may be cancelled due to non-availability of funds.

Aldan-Pierce agreed. The chair and other directors present—Warren Villagomez, Agida Quituga, Nelson, Thomas Liu, and Nick Nishikawa—approved the issuance of the invitation to bid without further discussion.

In a later interview, Aldan-Pierce said the Peace Memorial improvements is one of the projects that the board really wants to proceed with. Aldan-Pierce said it was their focus for 2019, but that they're not going to move it until 2020.

"Because people go there. There's a lot of memorial, a lot of historical things that happened there. And the way it is today is very stark and uninviting," the chair said.

Aldan-Pierce said they would like to re-route the road going to the existing shrines. Where the road is today breaks that up, she said. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Rental car parked at AMP is burglarized

An unknown burglar or group of burglars has victimized a rental car that was parked at the American Memorial Park in Garapan last Monday. Department of Public Safety officers are now looking into the case.

Police received a 911 call reporting the burglary incident on Monday, Dec. 2, 2019, at about 6:02pm.

Police dispatched to the scene met with the caller, who stated that their group had parked their rental car, a red Ford Mustang, in the parking lot of the American Memorial Park for a few hours before returning back. The victims mentioned that they parked their vehicle at about 10:30am and returned at 4:30pm. That's when the victims noticed that their bags were no longer in the vehicle. They notified their rental car company before calling for police assistance.

The items reported missing include a black backpack, a silver-colored Digno cellphone, a silver-colored Apple MacBook Air laptop, a pink Apple Watch, a brown Berluti wallet, a pair of white Apple AirPods, a red/purple key case, a white tote bag, and one red/purple Cartier wallet, including the victim's passport and driver's license.

DPS would like to remind the public to be diligent when purchasing electronics and/or designer wallets from unknown individuals as these items may have been stolen.

This case remains on going. If you have any information on the incident, call 911. If you wish to remain anonymous, call the CNMI Crime Stoppers hotline at 234-7272. (Saipan Tribune)

TSL Foundation backs tourism promotion programs

Christmas came early for PDM Promoters, Inc., after it received a $2,000 donation from the Tan Siu Lin Foundation for its beautification and tourism promotion projects.

Merlie Tolentino, executive director of the TSL Foundation—the charitable arm of TanHoldings—turned over the check to PDM Promoters, Inc. director and chief executive officer Misako Kamata last month at the TanHoldings Corporate Affairs' office at JP Center.

"The progress and success of our programs have largely been due to contributions from our sponsors who have gone out of their way to lend financial support to us. With the assistance of generous donors in our community, like the Tan Siu Lin Foundation, we are able to achieve our goals and continue our programs," Kamata said. "We share a common goal of serving and helping our community."

The TSL Foundation's donation was used to purchase materials for the Christmas trees that are now on display at Paseo de Marianas as part of the island's holiday festivities. The financial assistance will also help PDM Promoters, Inc. in its monthly cleanup drive and for the uniforms and instruments used by the Saipan Awaodori Team.

The Saipan Awaodori Team, which is made up of local dancers and musicians, travels to Japan annually and performs in key places in Tokyo. This year, the group joined the Koenji Awaodori Festival—the largest gathering in Tokyo—and was featured in a Japanese television show, highlighting the performances that the group does in different events in the Commonwealth, such as the Liberation Day Parade and Christmas in the Marianas.

"The Tan Siu Lin Foundation is pleased to work with PDM Promoters, Inc., which for more than a decade has been helping promote our islands to Japanese tourists. They are also responsible for the Christmas Tree Decorating Contest that schools look forward to every year and brings the holiday spirit on island," Tolentino said.

She also commended PDM Promoters, Inc. for instilling in its staff and members of the Saipan Awaodori Team the importance of taking care of the environment by holding regular cleanup drives, especially in areas frequented by tourists. (PR)

Man arrested for incident that happened 6 months ago

A man was arrested at his workplace last Wednesday for an alleged child abuse incident that took place six months ago outside the Kagman High School's back fence.

According to a statement yesterday from the CNMI Department of Public Safety, Theodore Oronigo Pehnos was arrested at his workplace last Dec. 4 at 11:54am on a warrant signed by Superior Court Associate Judge Wesley Bogdan last Tuesday, Dec. 3, 2019, at 3:30pm.

Pehnos faces charges of child abuse, assault and battery, and disturbing the peace. His cash bail was set at $5,000.

The DPS statement said that it received a call from Kagman High School last June 4, 2019, at about 3:50pm, about an alleged child abuse incident that had been witnessed by some of the school's staff.

Police who were dispatched to the scene met with a few individuals who saw the incident. The individuals stated that they noticed three minors—one female, two males—playing unaccompanied at the KHS basketball court. When a KHS staff asked one of the minors, if they had a guardian, the minors stated that they just wanted to hang out at the KHS basketball court as their parents weren't home.

As the KHS staff was calling Kagman Elementary School, the stepfather of the minors, later identified as Pehnos, walked over and yelled at the three minors. Pehnos then allegedly slapped and pushed his 8-year-old stepson, and punched his 10-year-old stepdaughter's back and pulled her hair. Pehnos looked at the KHS staff and allegedly said, "I don't give a *," as he walked away with the three minors. Witnesses at the scene immediately called for police assistance.

After meeting with the witnesses, police officers made their way to Pehnos' residence, where they noticed one of the minors had bruising on his face. The Division of Youth Services was called and a follow-up interview by police was conducted at a later date.

The DPS statement did not clarify why it took six months since the incident happened before Pehnos was arrested. (Saipan Tribune)

Yumul still expects Lottery Commission response

By ERWIN ENCINARES
erwin_encinares@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The House of Representatives Gaming Committee still expects a response from the CNMI Lottery Commission regarding the status of the Community Benefit Fund, which casino operator Imperial Pacific International (CNMI) LLC is supposed to pay into.

Committee chair Rep. Ralph Yumul (R-Saipan) told Saipan Tribune in an interview that he is still expecting a response from the CNMI Lottery Commission regarding the status of IPI's Community Benefit Fund payments.

"We should have an official response from them [the Lottery Commission] already, and I don't know what is taking so long. We are disappointed in them and this should have been a straight answer of who should be in charge of monitoring the Community Benefit Fund," Yumul said.

Yumul sent a letter dated Oct. 18, 2019 to both the Lottery Commission and the Commonwealth Casino Commission asking for a status update on the Community Benefit Fund, or the CBF.

The CBF is an annual contribution from IPI, with IPI supposed to chip in $10 million by Jan. 1, 2018, and another $10 million by June 1, 2018. Subsequently, IPI would contribute $20 million to the community chest every year on or before Oct. 1, 2019.

As of publication, only the CCC has responded to Yumul's letter.

"They [CCC] are pointing at another direction, so we are giving the Lottery Commission an opportunity to respond," he said.

In a letter dated Nov. 26, 2019, the CCC wrote to the committee stating their inability to comment since the matter is still "under investigation."

"Please be assured that upon completion of our investigation, we will update your committee on our findings and determinations," the CCC letter noted.

In his Oct. 18, 2019, letter, Yumul alleged that IPI only paid about $3 million of the CBF payments for 2018. He noted that IPI potentially owes $17 million in CBF payments based on "audited financial statements for the years ended Dec. 31, 2017, and Dec. 31, 2018."

Tinian mayor: Let's ensure equal access for everyone

By IVA MAURIN
iva_maurin@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Tinian Mayor Edwin P. Aldan is calling for equal access for everyone in the CNMI and that includes services for people with disabilities.

As keynote speaker during the celebration of the International Day of People with Disabilities last Wednesday at the CNMI Center for Living Independently building on Capital Hill, Aldan challenged government agencies and private entities to extend accommodations to provide services to everyone, especially to people with disabilities.

"As one Commonwealth, let us keep each other accountable for ensuring equal access to everyone in our communities," Aldan said.

The Tinian mayor is calling to ensure that the facilities and agencies in the Commonwealth are following the American Disability Act, for all the elder community members and those who have disability to have access to all the opportunities provided to the public.

The ADA, which became law in 1990, prohibits discrimination against individuals with disabilities. Standards have been established requiring for the construction and alteration of facilities to be made more accessible to PWDs.

"When I was elected into office as mayor of Tinian in 2018, I vowed to carry out a vision that I had as a lawmaker to make accommodations a reality for our island community on Tinian," Aldan stressed. "What began as making sure that all public, private, and government entities have updated disability parking spots that were specific and clear... had turned into renovating public places to make it accessible to everyone."

The mayor cited the Tinian fiesta grounds, which got destroyed by Super Typhoon Yutu, as an example. As they rebuilt the fiesta grounds, their special projects team engineered a new design that allows for a ramp to the stage to make it accessible to those in wheelchairs and for those who walk with canes.

Not only did the new design put the project in compliance with ADA, but it demonstrated to people who use wheelchairs and canes on the island that they are included in everything that the Tinian government does, and sets the bar and provides an example for other agencies to follow.

Aldan also promised that all projects that his office would do will include accommodations for PWDs.

"I vow to all of you here today, that every single project that will be done on Tinian by the Tinian Mayor's Office will include accommodations for those with disability," Aldan

CHCC bolsters flu shot campaign

By MARC A. VENUS
marc_venus@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

With the flu season now in full swing, the Commonwealth Health Care Corp. is bolstering its efforts to combat the flu virus and is urging all CNMI residents over 6 months old to get their annual flu vaccine, also called the "flu shot."

CHCC's Department of Public Health Services is working with all the schools in the CNMI to get all students vaccinated, according to Jeremy Sasamoto, Immunization Program manager. He said this initiative is an annual project of the Immunization Program to help students combat the flu virus.

The flu season typically starts in September and ends the following spring, usually around late March.

Influenza is a potentially serious disease that can lead to hospitalization and even death in rare cases. While every flu season is different, the flu affects people differently and vaccines are updated to better match the flu viruses that are expected to be most common during that flu season.

Sasamoto said Influenza B was the most common case of the flu last year. "We saw an uncommon pattern of the influenza B virus in patients last year," he said.

This form of influenza can only pass from human to human, and is equally severe to its counterpart, Influenza A. Influenza B is highly contagious and can have dangerous effects on a person's health in more severe cases; it can cause seasonal outbreaks and can be transferred throughout the year.

However, Influenza A is the most common form and can spread from animals to humans, and is known to cause pandemics.

It takes the body two weeks after getting the flu shot to have the right antibodies to fight off the flu virus. CHCC emphasizes getting the flu shot does not lead to getting the flu.

There are instances where flu shot patients have gotten the flu after receiving the shot, but those instances are still rarer than getting the actual flu infection. Even those people who are infected with the flu even after vaccination tend to not get as sick as those who get the flu and are not vaccinated.

CHCC recommends that flu shots are not administered to infants under 6 months of age, who must rely on "herd immunity," meaning people around them must be vaccinated and healthy in order to protect the child. Getting vaccinated helps to prevent the spread of the flu to the very young and very ill who may not be able to get the flu shot, such as those undergoing chemotherapy for cancer.

All pregnant women, regardless of their trimester of pregnancy, are also encouraged to get a flu shot. A flu shot during pregnancy can help prevent the flu and its complications for both the mother and fetus, and protects the baby from the flu after birth.

Those requiring a flu shot you may visit:

Fast legislative action seen on GHLI bill

The House of Representatives is expected to introduce and act as soon as possible on a bill that would adjust the fiscal year 2020 budget appropriations, despite it being already over two months into the fiscal year.

Rep. Ivan Blanco (R-Saipan) told Saipan Tribune Wednesday that he pre-filed a bill that would correct the Group Health and Life Insurance funding issue after Gov. Ralph DLG Torres vetoed Section 710(k) of the budget bill when he enacted it last September. That section mandated the Executive Branch to pay the GHLI premiums of Legislature and Judiciary employees.

Separately, House Speaker Blas "B.J." Jonathan Attao (R-Saipan) told Saipan Tribune in an interview that the Legislature has to push the matter. "We've already got the numbers down...for both branches, so we are going to appropriate those funds to the respective branches to address their needs for employees," he said.

"It's something the Chief Justice [Alexandro Castro] brought up as a concern since October [2019] and we wanted to get accurate numbers, so we've done all the calculations for that and we will be acting on that so we won't have to worry about it [in the future]," he added.

The speaker noted that the bill is needed to confirm that the payments are being made in order to avoid an interruption in services.

"This bill is simply correcting what we missed," Blanco told Saipan Tribune in a separate interview.

Attao noted that the bill would be introduced and immediately acted on in a future House session. He expects the House to support the legislation.

"...I'm sure that the members of the House [are] in full support of that and I believe the members of the Legislature in general supports the intent because that was the understanding, that the GHLI was going to be taken care of under the independent programs," he said.

Blanco noted in a previous interview that the Executive Branch and the House Ways and Means Committee, which he chairs, had exchanged communications during the budget process for fiscal year 2020, indicating that the Executive Branch would be shouldering the GHLI payments of legislative and judicial employees for the fiscal year. However, at the signing of the fiscal year 2020 budget, Torres vetoed the section that specified that.

On Nov. 25, 2019, Torres' chief of staff, Angel Demapan, told Saipan Tribune that the Torres administration is already working on a legislation that would clarify the payment of GHLI for fiscal year 2020. (Erwin Encinares)

Eighteen caregivers employed with Catholic Social Service and Health Services of the Pacific became certified nursing assistants last month after a three-month apprenticeship program through University of Guam and the Guam Department of Labor.

UNIVERSITY OF GUAM

18 caregivers become certified nursing assistants

Guam now has 18 more certified nursing assistants, or CNAs, following a three-month apprenticeship program provided by the University of Guam and the Guam Department of Labor. The CNAs are employees of Catholic Social Service and Health Services of the Pacific, where they worked as caregivers prior to starting the Nursing Assistant Education Program in June.

The demand for CNAs in Guam is growing with a higher vacancy rate than the U.S. mainland, said Margaret Hattori-Uchima, dean of UOG's School of Health. Based on a needs assessment the school conducted in February among Guam Memorial Hospital, Guam Regional Medical City, the Division of Senior Citizens, and Health Services of the Pacific, there was a 45% vacancy rate for nursing assistants, compared to the U.S. rate of 22%.

"Through this cohort, we have increased the number of CNAs on island, and we are glad to have helped identify a solution that addresses the certification needs and up-skilling for allied health professionals," said David Dell'Isola, director of the Guam Department of Labor.

CNAs work under the supervision of a registered nurse or licensed practical nurse preparing rooms and supplies, assisting with tests and procedures, and directly assisting patients. CNAs, unlike caregivers, must undergo a set number of classroom and clinical training hours and then pass both a written and skills exam. The apprentices received 160 hours of training after work and on weekends and were then certified by the Guam Board of Nurse Examiners after passing the national certification exam.

"We are thrilled to announce that the class had a 100% pass rate, which we attribute to the strong partnership among our faculty and staff, the Guam Department of Labor, and the employers," Hattori-Uchima said. "These 18 CNAs will now return to their employers with enhanced skills they can begin using right away in caring for patients."

The program reached a less common segment of the population when it comes to nursing education—with the average age of the class being 43 and nearly half being Pacific Islanders of CHamoru or Micronesian descent.

The training program was funded through the State Apprenticeship Expansion grant, a $1.7-million grant to increase registered apprentices in Guam by 300 workers within allied health, telecommunications, construction, and hospitality. The funding covered the students' tuition, uniforms, books, clearances, and physical exams to be part of the program.

"We look forward to working with more community partners to implement additional programs similar to the CNA Registered Apprenticeship program that help develop our workforce," Dell'Isola said. (UOG)

He killed Trayvon Martin, now George Zimmerman is suing—everyone. Why?

George Zimmerman burst back into the news on Wednesday, just in time for the holiday season.

You remember Zimmerman? He was acquitted in the 2013 fatal shooting of unarmed 17-year-old Trayvon Martin—a case that rocked Florida.

The former neighborhood watch volunteer now blames everyone involved in his prosecution—and he wants money—$100 million, to be exact.

Zimmerman is back. He is now suing/blaming Martin's parents, prosecutors and witnesses who played a role in his case. He claims the prosecution was built on evidence and a timeline provided by a friend of the teen who was on the phone with him when Zimmerman approached Martin, walking to his father's apartment at the Sanford development.

Martin was walking back from a convenience store through the development, where Zimmerman also lived. He looked suspicious to Zimmerman, who approached the teen. A struggle ensued and the teen was fatally wounded. Zimmerman's attorney used the stand your ground defense in the case, which went to trial in 2013.

Now, Zimmerman and his new attorney, Larry Klayman, founder of Judicial Watch, cite as basis of their Polk County suit the information in a documentary about the case titled "The Trayvon Hoax." It accuses the Martin family of engineering false testimony. The director has scheduled a press conference this week in Coral Gables, Fla., to coincide with a film screening there. That screening has now been canceled.

Setting aside the arrogance, irony and the merits of the case aside, we have one wish for Zimmerman, who turned into a bad penny since this tragedy occurred. He seems to get arrested every couple of years, bouncing back onto the headlines—like he just did.

Martin's parents have started a foundation in his name, written a book in tribute of their son and his mother, Sybriana Fulton, is running for Miami-Dade commissioner. Meanwhile, Zimmerman has been arrested for domestic violence, a gun scuffle in a road rage incidents and also stalking.

And now Zimmerman wants to go back to court, this time for money.

All Floridians should rue the day that Trayvon Martin encountered this troubled and tortured man.

We have one wish for Zimmerman: Please, leave us alone.

Skymark has landed

The takeaway is that we need to help Skymark help us help them. This new era of Japanese tourism to the Northern Marianas depends on a mutually beneficial relationship. Skymark can't fly unless we keep their customers happy, satisfied, and feeling as if they got their money's worth out of their vacation to paradise. We can't keep our economy together without a vibrant source-country diversified tourism industry. We allow ourselves to rely on only two major volume source markets at our peril. Sooner or later, that will break and leave us stranded. We need three or more major source markets to safely and profitably navigate our economy through the turbulent air of a delicately balanced industry like tourism.

We need Japan. Skymark needs a profitable offshore route. We need to help them keep those planes full with top quality promotional programs from MVA. We need to make sure our product—Saipan, Tinian, and Rota—are as good as we can possibly make them. Working together, everyone wins. "Tourism is everybody's business" was never truer than during this early period of direct flights from Tokyo/Narita once again. We can do it. We must do it. I have to help, however I can. You need to help, however you can. Think about it and please do whatever you can to help.

One last point. Skymark has said they are interested in bringing in charter flights from outlying second and third-tier cities in Japan to Saipan. This is a very important source of new clientele for us. Much work has been done by MVA to promote our islands to the visitors from Osaka and Nagoya, but they had no flight to get here anymore. Now they will have those flights on a charter basis. Third-tier cities like Sendai, Niigata, Hiroshima, Fukuoka, Sapporo, etc. offer fresh new possibilities to expose the friendly folk of Japan to our natural wonders here on Saipan, Tinian, and Rota. Let's help Skymark bring in those charters.

Yes to B&B's, no moratorium

It was heartening to see a voice of reason speaking out in the form of Ms. Tracy B. Norita, Revenue and Taxation director for the CNMI, part of whose job it is to oversee and maximize income sources due the government. In her professional opinion, it would be a mistake to leave the money on the table that new B&B businesses will bring into the treasury of the CNMI if they are forbidden to even apply to start their new businesses. I agree and would add that those type of businesses provide a much-needed service to our tourism industry by providing alternative short-term accommodations to some of our tourists looking for that kind of vacation experience.

He has owned and operated a number of unusual businesses and most recently worked as the marketing manager for MVA. Bruce likes to read, travel, tinker with bicycles, hike, swim, and play a bit of golf. He is opinionated and writes when the moon is full and the mood strikes.

In her testimony to the House of Representatives on the matter, she added that not only was the moratorium on licensing new B&Bs a bad idea but that the proposal to stop new businesses from applying for three long years was not something done by any other taxing jurisdiction.

Her key point in opposing Lee Pan's H.L.B. 21-32 was that the bill would stop legitimate new businesses from starting up but does essentially nothing to solve the problem that Leean cited for introducing the legislation in the first place. That some B&Bs currently providing the service are not properly taxed or licensed by the government. She is absolutely right—if we are not collecting the hotel occupancy tax correctly from some businesses that needs to be addressed immediately by the appropriate agencies: Commerce for licensing and Finance enforcement for the taxes. By P.L. 18-1 the Department of Finance gets hundreds of thousands of dollars annually from the HOT to enforce that taxes' proper payment. So enforce it already.

If 20% of B&Bs are not paying their tax or are not properly licensed, simply ferret them out and force them into compliance, along with the other 80% doing it right. This is not rocket science. Some googling to see who is advertising, some sleuthing to find the others, the purchase of a few padlocks to immediately shut down any unlicensed business (including locally owned "apartments") not paying their tax. If a business offers to rent rooms to the public by the month or by the year, it is an apartment. If they offer such rooms by the day or the week they are a hotel and should be paying the tax. Simple. So simple in fact that I hereby offer to subcontract this simple job of finding offenders for a measly 15% of what new income I can bring in to the CNMI coffers. What a nice guy. Email me for details.

Seriously, there is money to be made. Enforcement procedures need to be put into place that will produce results right away.

Perennial as the grass

Budgetary shortfall is no longer news for it seems as perennial as the grass. It goes up or down depending on economic activities.

Business activities (investment) warrant a bit more focus and attention to stir and expand revenue generation. If done right we should meet obligations with fund sufficiency.

It's an opportunity to raising the poverty income of nearly 15-thousand employees. In other words, healthy investment spurs more income and higher paying jobs. As it is most employees are quizzing what tomorrow would bring. Any hope of improving their income or "not yet, already?"

Understood the inadvertent imposition of obligations overrunning revenue generation. Hope it isn't a reason to attempt sneaking additional taxes against hard hit taxpayers literally struggling with poverty income levels today.

Nonetheless, we're equipped with foresight to see in advance what happens when ill fated decisions on spending are allowed. We have the opportunity now to do it right. If sacrifice is in order let's do it in the interest of timely delivery of services.

Meanwhile, though we may be poised with investments we shouldn't be complacent with it given the persistent increase in the cost of obligations here. There's no room for complacency!

In fact, we should emulate what other cities across the country are doing by directly helping ongoing businesses improve upon current investments. This expands services while increasing revenue generation concurrently. It's happening across the fruited plain.

Rework!

It seems, however, we've taken a slide into the usual "mañana" on investments for one reason or another. Must not be precipitous or negligent on this score. It's a matter of improving and sustaining the quality of life at home. And it's good to keep it up while we're ahead.

Moreover, our savings grace has been and still is the nature of tiny pearly isles in the cultural tradition of sharing. We use it generously especially when someone needs help.

On a personal basis, I'd extend help to anyone in need without a blink. The sense of satisfaction can never be explained seeing that my fellow man makes it through another day. Generous sharing is part and whole of the island culture.

Quietly

Being musically inclined, I usually have soft music while I read or write. It helps set the stage for the thought process. I prefer soft and melodic instrumental music from piano and guitar.

While at it, the melodic tune Whispering Hope playing in my laptop would slide in every so often. I'd listen and hum while reading. It's a tune that revives my sense of hope no matter how spent intellectual acuity may be. A certain part says, "wait for the sunshine tomorrow after the shower is done".

Yes, after the rhythm of the rain fades comes fresh morning air that revives and resets my buttons. It's a new day and ready for whatever it brings. I suppose hope whispers as I sip my first cup of coffee at dawn looking forward to another bright day in paradise.

Plague

While mindful of events at home, I also have my eyes of the plague in China. Hope it is brought under control so it doesn't turn pandemic on a global basis. About four cases have been found where all four people have died, recently. ***

National Dems inquisition into presidential impeachment raises the vital query: is it a search for justice? Indeed, it included legal eagles from prestigious law firms and professors of law. I find their succinct explanations a real learning experience how the best legal minds view constitutional issues.

Reality

It would be interesting to hear answers from the elected elite on queries relating to improving the quality of life of villagers in their precincts.

Most would defer to the economy, an interesting concept though hardly understood by Da Boysis. Puzzling the courage to use it as the single word covers all misperception. How about revisiting reality check at least intermittently?

The law!

The concept of "ascendancy of laws" simply shows what laws reign supreme over others. Constitutional law is supreme over statutory laws (those approved by the legislature).

I raise the issue in light of plans by Rep. Roman Benavente to transfer disposition of public lands from DPL to DNLR. No sir! Statutory law is inferior to constitutional law.

Moreover, there's a strong history behind the assignment of public lands to DPL. Imagine if it were under whimsical legislative disposition from half-cocked policymakers. Fandaño!

No sir! Benavente must review the supremacy of laws concept to do justice to current disposition of public land. The issue entailed an involved discussion in the first constitutional convention. Review it for your own purpose and benefit, sir!

There is just no excuse for not enforcing the law. The slackers hurt our income but not as bad as putting a moratorium in place that chokes the very business we are relying on out of business before they even start.

I oppose any B&B moratorium, as should any thinking person. Cure the real problem—poor enforcement. Don't worry with nostrum powder to calm the itch when, with less effort, we can cure the sore that causes the itch. Crank up a massive positive cash flow engine by finding, identifying, and charging current and future taxes to all such establishments plus a nice hefty fine for past transgressions, payable along with their new monthly HOT tax in small installments so they can stay in business and provide our government with the money it needs and our tourists with a place to stay.

Nancy Pelosi was right to be cautious of impeachment, and to proceed with inquiry

Nancy Pelosi was right—both times. And that's the Democrats' problem.

The House speaker had it right when she repeatedly said for most of the past year that impeaching President Donald Trump would be politically unwise without the prospect of some support from Republicans.

"Impeachment is so divisive to the country that unless there's something so compelling and overwhelming and bipartisan, I don't think we should go down that path, because it divides the country," she told The Washington Post last March.

But she was also right when she later decided Trump's effort to withhold military aid and an Oval Office visit from Ukraine's new president to force him to investigate potential 2020 rival Joe Biden required a full-scale House impeachment inquiry.

"We could not ignore what the president did," she said on CBS' "60 Minutes." "He gave us no choice."

Despite Republican tactics aimed more at disruption than defense, the House Intelligence Committee has now produced a report detailing what Trump did and why from a series of witnesses who were either nonpartisan career government employees or Trump nominees.

But as the House Judiciary Committee prepares to write and approve the actual articles of impeachment, both Pelosi's initial concerns and her decision to proceed remain valid.

An array of polls shows the country split along partisan lines on the need to impeach and convict Trump. The hearings appear to have produced little change in the balance that also shows a roughly even division among the independents who could decide next year's election.

The likelihood of Senate conviction seems no greater than at the start of the process, since not one of the 53-member Republican majority has shown any sign of voting to convict Trump, though a handful have criticized him or remained intriguingly silent.

Still, the Intelligence Committee's Democratic majority strongly indicted Trump, declaring he deliberately "solicited the interference of a foreign Government, Ukraine, to benefit his reelection," something that, for a normal citizen, would constitute a potentially indictable criminal offense.

In recent weeks, Pelosi and other top Democrats have used the word "bribery" to describe how Trump held up congressionally approved funds for Ukraine until it agreed to take steps that could help his reelection prospects.

Rep. Adam Schiff (D-Calif.), the Intelligence Committee chairman, said Tuesday he thought that was "what the founders had in mind when they used that word in the Constitution," referring to the provision listing "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors" as the offenses warranting impeachment.

Another reason: according to The Washington Post, the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee found that focus group participants in swing districts considered "bribery" a better description for Trump's conduct than "quid pro quo" or "extortion."

Of course, Ukraine is not the only problematic area for the president.

Until Pelosi and the rest of the Democratic leadership decided that his Ukraine acts crossed the impeachment line, various House committees had been studying other questionable presidential acts.

For example, the Judiciary Committee, which will draft the articles against Trump, reportedly has been looking into not only what the Intelligence Committee called "categorical and unprecedented obstruction" of the Ukraine probe, but prior examples cited by Special Counsel Robert Mueller's report on the 2016 Trump campaign; potential campaign finance violations stemming from the pre-election 2016 payments to two women alleging sexual affairs with Trump; and alleged violation of the Constitution's so-called "emoluments" provision barring a president from benefiting financially from his presidency.

Some inside and outside government have urged the House to broaden any impeachment charges.

Kenneth Foard McCallion, a former federal prosecutor and author of a new book highly critical of Trump, contended on the Morning Consult website that the House "has an obligation to include within the scope of its impeachment inquiry whether Trump has committed treason by providing aid and comfort to Russia, to the severe detriment to fundamental U.S. interests."

Repeated acts favoring Vladimir Putin's Russia infect many of Trump's foreign policy decisions beyond Ukraine. But there are two reasons for Democrats to confine charges to the narrower case involving the former Soviet republic.

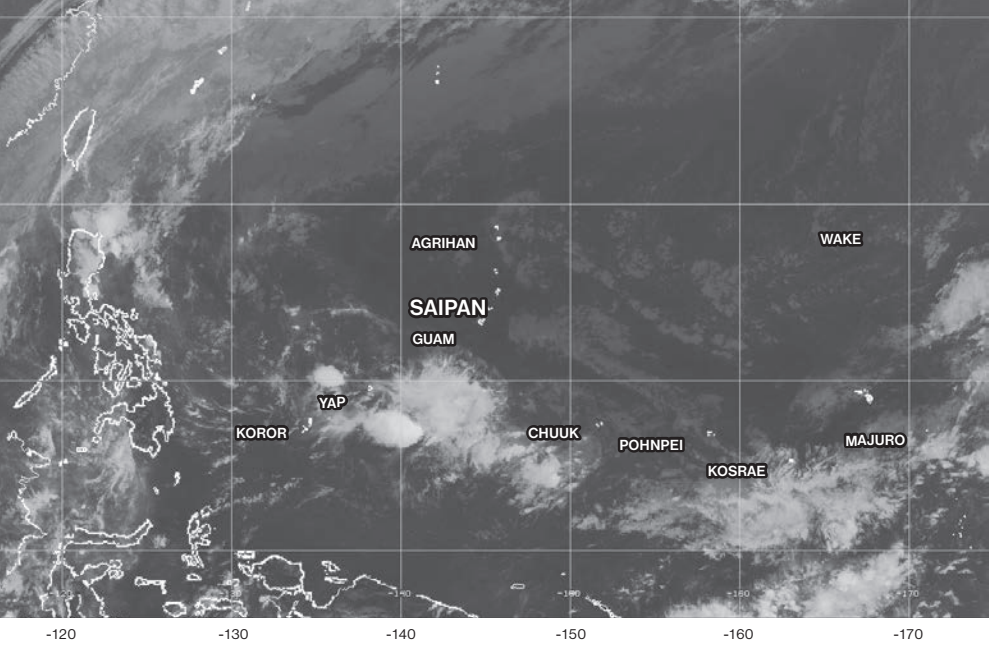

First, it would stress the clear-cut allegation Trump misused presidential power in his own interest, rather than the country's. Second, and most unfortunately, the Democrats are operating within time constraints, given the onset of the 2020 election campaign.

In the coming weeks, the House will likely vote to make Trump the third president to be impeached. Early next year, the Senate will likely reject the charges, making him the third president to be acquitted.

Though Trump would then claim vindication, impeachment would stand as a permanent stain on his presidential record. Then, it will be up to the voters to render the ultimate judgment in November.

Message from the Executive Director

Daniel Aquino

Greetings and Happy Holidays to the people of the CNMI. As we prepare to welcome the new year, I wanted to share some museum updates. Fiscal year 2019, has been very challenging given the devastation that Super Typhoon Yutu brought to the CNMI in 2018.

Fortunately, the museum only sustained minor damages. The NMI Museum continues to be leak and flood free, despite the major typhoons and heavy rains we received. Former Speaker Ralph Demapan and I are working closely, trying to secure additional funding to address the critical shortage of storage capacity and the completion of other essential projects.

Budget cuts, delayed vendor payments have made our operations very difficult. Many vendors who used to provide services, want payment before engaging in other projects. Other businesses, no longer accept government purchase orders and instead want full payment before services are performed or goods delivered.

The NMI Museum is an independent program from the Office of the Governor. The museum is in a unique situation because it serves as a major tourist attraction site, it is the official Commonwealth repository of historical and cultural materials and its building (Old Japanese Hospital) is a historical site.

Given the lack of budget for maintenance of the 93-year-old building, we are truly blessed that some businesses are able to recognize our importance to tourism and offer contributions.

Governor Torres and Lt. Governor Palacios, personally visited the museum and have been very supportive of our program by addressing our immediate needs and acknowledging our role in preservation and education of our proud, historic Chamorro and Carolinian culture.

The legislature and the Marianas Visitors Authority have also played major roles in the repairs and transformation of our only CNMI government owned museum. I'm pleased with Secretary of Finance Dave Atalig, Finance Director for Administrative Services Bert Torres, CNMI-Treasurer Connie Agulto and Customs Director Jose Mafnas who have also expressed their support to assist the museum.

The museums success is incumbent on the acceptance of the business community, tour groups, government agencies, legislature, Senators but most especially to our residents, to please visit the museum.

The success of the NMI Museum relies on two factors, public participation through visits and lastly, our willingness to accept that we all play significant roles in its success by simply sacrificing a can of soda, green tea and using that money to voluntarily donate to the museum or lobbying our leaders for sustainable funding to achieve success.

NMI MUSEUM HAS OFFICIAL TOUR GUIDES

The NMI Museum of History and Culture officially has certified tour guides who passed the Marianas Visitors Authority tour guide certification program that is being administered by the Northern Marianas College.

Mr. Archie Ajoste and John David Apatang Reyes successfully passed the program with 96 and 95 percent grades respectively. This is the first time that the museum will have certified tour guides and I want to congratulate both gentlemen for a job well done.

The certification program is mandated through CNMI Public Law 18-58. The Marianas Visitors Authority Tour Guide certification program reinforced both Archie and John David's knowledge of the Chamorro and Carolinian history and provides credibility with the information being provided to our guests regarding CNMI historical facts.

TOUR COMPANIES

Northern Marianas Colleges offers history class (one segment) as part of the tour guide certification program in the NMI Museum. It's very disappointing that tour companies who send their employees thru the certification program are never seen again.

Even more troubling, is when busses packed with Japanese tourists visit the Sugar King Park but skip the museum located in the Old Japanese Hospital. The Old Japanese Hospital, Japanese Laboratory and the 2 Japanese water tanks were built pre-war era and survived World War II.

There has been past communications with these tour groups who have also brought representatives to check on the state and museums visual appearance in order to bring Japanese tourists but so far, Sugar King Park has been one of the beneficiaries that tour operators have been utilizing.

NMI MUSEUM HOSTS THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

Secretary of Finance David Atalig, conducted his staff meeting at the NMI Museum's recently repaired and renovated, Old Japanese Laboratory building.

The meeting gave us the opportunity to have a dialogue with the Secretary and the Department of Finance to discuss the difficulties, challenges and problems that we are experiencing as a result of budget cuts, late vendor payments that hamper and jeopardize services from being canceled.

Having the Secretary of Finance and his leadership team and staff visit the museum to hear our concerns was a morale booster.

After a brief presentation, the Department of Finance was given a tour, shown before and after photos of the museum and witnessed the high level of attention, cleanliness, maintenance and care, the 93-year old building, its exhibits and artifacts receives.

Given the minimal financial resources the museum receives, I am humbled, and very proud of my team and salute each of them for the hard work they perform. Kudos and many thanks to the Secretary of Finance and Finance Director for Administrative Services Bert Torres for coordinating and organizing their meeting at the NMI Museum.

Special thanks to the Finance Treasurer, Connie Agulto, Customs Director Jose Mafnas, and the entire Department of Finance for participating and attending this productive dialogue.

I encourage other departments to think outside the box and have their meetings at the museum so they can also be able to tour our facility.

Lee: It's time to report and study crimes regionally

Sen. Régine Biscoe Lee has secured a regional commitment to report and share data about crimes committed against children, women, and the elderly across the Pacific.

The Democrat lawmaker is on Saipan this week as part of Guam's delegation to the 60th general membership meeting of the Association of Pacific Island Legislatures. Lee serves as a member of the regional organization's board of directors for the 2018-2019 term.

As part of this year's proceedings, Lee introduced a

» Guam lawmaker introduces resolution on shared safety concerns at APIL resolution that commits APIL members to "unifying efforts to curb the victimization of vulnerable populations, by establishing and committing to regional reporting of crimes committed against children, women, and the elderly." The measure is co-sponsored by the delegations from Chuuk, the CNMI, Kiribati, and Hawaii. It was unanimously adopted by the APIL yesterday.

"Across the Pacific, cultures share values that revere the elderly, honor women, and protect children. Unfortunately, throughout our region too many nations and territories see violence and exploitation perpetrated against these important members of our island families," the resolution reads, in part. "Efforts to understand, prevent, and punish these crimes can be made more effective if communities tied by common cultural threads collect and share comparable data."

Regional stakeholders have noted gaps in reporting gender-based and other biased crimes as recently as this year's United Nations Development Programme's Pacific Women Leadership Summit, which Lee attended.

"These despicable crimes steal the innocence of our youth, instill fear in our mothers, and violate the trust of our wisest familial leaders. I'm thankful that the members of APIL agree that by coming together, we can make a difference," Lee said. "These opportunities to learn from one another, and commit to solving problems across the Pacific with solutions from within our region, is the best way forward. This is the first step to better researching and curbing these violent acts."

The resolution provides that APIL members will establish, by local statute or otherwise, at least an annual report of crimes perpetrated against children, women, and the elderly. These reports will include important information like:

- The total number and demographic information of victims (including age, gender, ethnicity, etc.);

- The total number and demographic information of convicted abusers (including age, gender, relationship to victim, number of convictions, etc.);

- Information about crime perpetrated (clarifying violence, criminal sexual conduct, financial exploitation, etc.);

- Information regarding the resolution of criminal cases (verdict reached, plea deal negotiated, dismissal of case, etc.);

- Current penalties for crimes committed against children, women, and the elderly; and

- Any newly adopted or enacted rules, regulations, or statutes addressing crimes committed against children, women, and the elderly.

Once compiled and published, APIL member jurisdictions will transmit their reports to the association's secretariat, who will then post all data to the APIL website for the free use of regional researchers and legislators.

Lee also authored a resolution that continues the Micronesia Challenge, a successful regional cleanup program. This measure also was adopted unanimously. (PR)

668K will lose food stamp benefits under new work rules

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hundreds of thousands of Americans who rely on the federal food stamp program will lose their benefits under a new Trump administration rule that will tighten work requirements for recipients.

The move by the administration is the latest in its attempt to scale back the social safety net for low-income Americans. It is the first of three proposed rules targeting the Supplemental Nutrition Program, known as SNAP, to be finalized. The program feeds more than 36 million people.

The plan, announced Wednesday, will limit states from exempting work-eligible adults from having to maintain steady employment in order to receive benefits.

The Agriculture Department estimates the change would save roughly $5.5 billion over five years and cut benefits for roughly 688,000 SNAP recipients. That's down from its original estimate that 750,000 people would lose benefits.

Under current rules, work-eligible able-bodied adults without dependents and between the ages of 18 and 49 can currently receive only three months of SNAP benefits in a three-year period if they don't meet the 20-hour work requirement. But states with high unemployment rates or a demonstrable lack of sufficient jobs can waive those time limits.

The new rule imposes stricter criteria states must meet in order to issue waivers. Under the plan, states can only issue waivers if a city or county has an unemployment rate of 6% or higher. The waivers will be good for one year and will require the governor to support the request.

The final rule will be published in the federal register Thursday, and go into effect in April.

Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue said the rule will help move people "from welfare to work."

"We want to encourage people by giving them a helping hand, but not an infinitely giving hand," he said.

Congressional Democrats and advocates for the poor were quick to condemn the administration's actions.

Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich., said the plan will only serve to punish workers whose jobs are seasonal or unreliable.

"This administration is out of touch with families who are struggling to make ends meet by working seasonal jobs or part time jobs with unreliable hours," said Stabenow, the top Democrat on the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, & Forestry.

House Republicans unsuccessfully pushed to include SNAP work requirement provisions in last year's farm bill.

Stabenow said "there's a reason" they didn't make it into the final version.

Robert Greenstein, president of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, said the rule would disproportionately affect minorities. He urged better job training and a higher minimum wage instead.

"Denying them basic food and nutrition is not the route that a fair and compassionate administration of either party should take," he said in a statement.

Over the past year the Agriculture Department has proposed three significant changes to the food stamp program. In addition to restricting time limit waivers, the USDA has proposed eliminating broad-based categorical eligibility, a measure that allows recipients of certain non-cash public benefits to automatically qualify for food stamps, and changing how utility costs are factored into benefit calculations.

Brandon Lipps, deputy under secretary for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Nutrition and Consumer Services, did not say when the department will finalize the other two proposed rules.

The Urban Institute in a study released last month estimated that taken together, the three measures would affect roughly 2.2 million households, and 3.7 million individual beneficiaries.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., blasted the Trump administration's efforts to reduce public benefits.

Across Capitol Hill, impeachment saga shifts

WASHINGTON (AP)—A different chairman. A committee twice the size. A shift from evidence to law.

Wednesday's Judiciary Committee hearing was full of signs that the impeachment of President Donald Trump is advancing away from the drama of his Ukraine conduct toward the grave business of approving charges against him. That meant turning from tales of international intrigue and shadow diplomacy to scholarly talk about what the founders meant when they wrote the impeachment standard of "high crimes and misdemeanors" into the Constitution.

For a change, the famously combative Judiciary Committee plunged through the proceedings with comity and restraint. Chairman Jerrold Nadler, D-N.Y., on the hot seat to deliver experts who say Trump's behavior is impeachable, gaveled the committee through a handful of objections and roll call votes. For long stretches, 41 of the fiercest partisans in the House sat through the professors' testimony as quietly as church mice.

"I'll give the chairman credit," ranking Republican Doug Collins of Georgia said in the late afternoon. "He's actually following proper procedure."

The relative peace on the dais belied the bitterness that remains between the parties over whether Trump abused his office by pressuring Ukraine to investigate Democrat Joe Biden — and whether his actions are impeachable.

Partisan bickering and grousing bubbled forth at times. Nadler raised some hackles by suggesting that the still-to-be-decided impeachment articles might go beyond Trump's plans on Ukraine and wrap in his conduct during special counsel Robert Mueller's Russia investigation.

"This is Act II of the three-part tragedy of impeachment," said Rep. Ben Cline, R-Va.

Republicans also took aim at a Democratic witness, Stanford law professor Pamela Karlan, who had joked early in the day that the president "can name his son Barron, he can't make him a baron."

She was trying to make the point that Trump is a president, not a king. Nonetheless, she apologized. First lady Melania Trump said Karlan "should be ashamed of your very angry and obviously biased public pandering, and using a child to do it."

Broadly, there clearly was a shift afoot across Capitol Hill and the sense that the process was accelerating toward a House vote — and later the GOP-controlled Senate — no matter who objects or tweets.

The contrasts started even before Nadler's gavel fell on Wednesday. The night before, the House Intelligence Committee voted to send its report on Trump's Ukraine conduct to the Judiciary Committee charged with writing the articles of impeachment. Hours later, House Democrats gave the lead investigator, Chairman Adam Schiff, D-Calif., a sustained standing ovation inside a private caucus meeting. And House Speaker Nancy Pelosi made clear that impeachment loomed.

Harris exit points to hurdles facing minority candidates

Kamala Harris cloaked her presidential campaign in the promise of becoming the first black woman in the White House. That wasn't enough for donors and supporters, including black voters.

The California senator abruptly withdrew from the race on Tuesday after her once-promising campaign failed to coalesce around a message that would resonate with voters. And without clear support from voters, Harris couldn't raise the money needed to keep going.

Responsibility for the collapse of a presidential campaign almost always rests with the candidate. But Harris' exit also demonstrates the unique challenges facing candidates of color in the 2020 campaign. As Democratic voters of all races almost singularly obsess over who is seen as best positioned to defeat President Donald Trump next year, candidates who aren't white are largely seen as not fitting the bill.

With less than two months before voting begins, those judgments—right or wrong—are becoming fatal as donors watch these cues to decide when to pull back.

"It's the money, it's the support, it's the polls. ... It's an assumption for black candidates that their campaigns are long shots," said Quentin James, the founder and executive director of Collective-PAC, an organization aimed at building black political power. "We're left to wonder why is it that a candidate's race still impacts how much money they can raise or how much support they get from institutional Democratic donors?"

Of course, Barack Obama, the first black president, is one of the most successful Democratic fundraisers, still collecting millions of dollars for the party nearly three years after he left the White House. And plenty of white candidates have had money problems this year.

John Hickenlooper, the former governor of Colorado, couldn't raise enough money for his presidential bid and chose to run for the U.S. Senate instead. Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand of New York is a powerhouse fundraiser in her home state but couldn't translate that success to her presidential campaign and dropped out in August. Montana Gov. Steve Bullock ended his campaign this week, also bemoaning money trouble.

But other white candidates have had success that women and candidates of color have said isn't available to them. Harris, for instance, is the highest-ranking black woman in the U.S. government. But the $35.5 million she raised during her campaign falls far short of the $51.5 million that Pete Buttigieg, the 37-year-old white mayor of South Bend, Indiana, has collected.

Other white candidates with big questions about their electability have also hauled in substantial sums of money. Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders has raised $61 million—more than any of his rivals—despite debate over whether his policies are too liberal. Concerns over the 78-year-old's candidacy also grew after he had a heart attack in October. He has since returned to active campaigning. (AP)

Military: Sailor shoots 3 at Pearl Harbor, takes own life

HONOLULU (AP)—A U.S. sailor shot and wounded three civilian Department of Defense employees at the Pearl Harbor shipyard Wednesday before taking their own life, the military said. Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, one of the Navy's major installations, said the shooting began around 2:30 p.m. at Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard. The military didn't release a motive or any identifying information about the sailor who opened fire. Two hospitals said they were each treating a victim but didn't have details on their conditions. The base has reopened following a lockdown. The shipyard repairs, maintains and modernizes the ships and submarines of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, which is headquartered at Pearl Harbor. The base is the home port for 10 destroyers and 15 submarines. Hawaii Gov. David Ige said the White House has offered assistance from federal agencies and that the state is also ready to help if needed. "I join in solidarity with the people of Hawaii as we express our heartbreak over this tragedy and concern for those affected by the shooting," Ige said in a statement. The shipyard is across the harbor from the Pearl Harbor National Memorial, which on Saturday will mark the 78th anniversary of the Japanese attack that propelled the U.S. into World War II. More than 2,300 Americans died in the attack on Dec. 7, 1941.

Police say missing Texas woman killed; man arrested in death

EL PASO, Texas (AP)—A Texas woman who went missing after going on a date in July was killed, and a man has been arrested in her death, police said Wednesday. El Paso police said the body of Erika Andrea Gaytan, 29, has not been recovered. She was last heard from July 13 after going to a concert. "Her body has not been found, but based on forensic and other evidence gathered over the course of the investigation detectives have reason to believe that she is deceased and was the victim of a murder," police spokesman Enrique Carrillo said in a statement. Ricardo Marquez, 28, of El Paso has been arrested and charged with her murder, Carrillo said. He is being held on $1 million bond. Police issued a missing person alert in July describing Gaytan as "endangered." She was last seen by her family on the day of the concert, and they reported her missing on July 16. Gaytan's family said when she went missing that it was not like her to go off and leave her 7-year-old son behind. According to a police affidavit, Marquez told detectives he had taken Gaytan to his home after their date, but they argued and Gaytan used a ride-hailing app to get a lift. However, police said no such order was made from her phone.

Hundreds of Yellowstone bison to be culled this winter

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP)—National park officials in Wyoming have announced plans for the selective slaughter of between 600 and 900 Yellowstone bison this winter to help manage population numbers. The Bozeman Daily Chronicle reported Tuesday that the officials expect most of the animals to be taken by hunters or shipped to slaughter. Some would stay alive in corrals or under park quarantine. Officials say the exact number of bison expected to be culled out of the estimated 4,900 depends on the winter migration. State, federal and tribal agencies managing bison say the winter plan was finalized Tuesday under the Interagency Bison Management Plan, a day after a judge rejected an attempt to block bison hunts this year. Officials say the plan includes putting 110 bison into brucellosis quarantine to produce disease-free bison.

North Korea warns US against meeting on its human rights

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—North Korea warned Wednesday that tensions on the Korean peninsula will increase and the situation “take a turn for the worse again” if the United States goes ahead with a U.N. Security Council meeting on the country’s human rights situation.

North Korea’s U.N. ambassador, Kim Song, said in a letter to the 14 other council members obtained by The Associated Press that Pyongyang considers any council meeting on its human rights “another serious provocation” resulting from the United States’ “hostile policy” and “will respond strongly to the last.”

“The United States and those countries on board shall bear full responsibility,” he warned.

The United States holds the Security Council presidency this month and diplomats said the Trump administration is planning a meeting on North Korea’s human rights situation, probably on Dec. 10. The U.S. Mission did not respond to an email asking about the meeting.

The council discussed the rights situation in North Korea from 2014 through 2017, but skipped 2018.

The meetings went ahead only after a procedural vote in the 15-member council where at least nine nations are required to support holding a session. A similar vote would be required for a meeting this month.

This undated photo provided on Wednesday, Dec. 4, 2019, by the North Korean government shows North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, center, speaks to lieutenants during his visit to Mount Paektu, North Korea.

Kim called any discussion of North Korea’s human rights “a flagrant violation” of the U.N. Charter and “an act of flattering and yielding to the U.S.’s hostile policy.”

It is a result of that “deep-rooted” policy, he said, “that the situation of the Korean peninsula remains strained and the nuclear issue has yet to be resolved.”

Earlier Wednesday, a half dozen European countries again condemned North Korea’s 13 “provocative” ballistic missile launches since May, saying they violate Security Council resolutions and “undermine regional security and stability as well as international peace and security.”

They also condemned recent North Korean threats “to partners in the region and beyond.”

The statement was made by the five European council members—Belgium, France, Germany, United Kingdom and Poland—and Estonia, which will join the U.N.’s most powerful body in January. The Europeans issued the statement after closed Security Council consultations they requested on North Korea’s latest missile launches on Nov. 28, where they were briefed by U.N. political chief Rosemary DiCarlo. The 15-member council did not issue any statement.

The Europeans again urged North Korea “to engage in good faith in meaningful negotiations with the United States aimed at denuclearization, and to take concrete steps to abandoning all weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missile programs in a complete, verifiable and irreversible manner.”

“There is no other way to achieve security and stability on the Korean peninsula,” the statement said. “Continued provocations risk undermining the prospect for successful negotiations.”

North Korea has ramped up its missile tests in recent months, and experts say the launches are likely to continue as a way to pressure Washington into meeting Pyongyang’s demand for new proposals to revive nuclear diplomacy by the end of December.

Chinese foreign minister arrives in South Korea for talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi arrived in South Korea on Wednesday for his first visit in four years amid efforts to patch up relations damaged by Seoul’s decision to host a U.S. anti-missile system that Beijing perceives as a security threat. Meeting South Korean Foreign Minister Kang Kyung-wha in Seoul, Wang described the countries as “close neighbors” that should strengthen cooperation in the face of fast-moving regional politics. In what appeared to be a jab at the Trump administration, which has been locked in a tense trade dispute with China, Wang asserted that “unilateralism” is currently the biggest threat to world peace and stability and called for Seoul and Beijing to jointly uphold “multilateralism” and free trade. Kang said Wang’s visit provides an opportunity to hold discussions on improving “weak” areas in bilateral relations and exchange views on denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula and stabilizing peace. Upon his arrival at Incheon International Airport, Wang told reporters it was unclear whether Washington and Beijing could strike a trade deal by the end of the year and said negotiations should be based on “mutual respect and equality.”

Indian paramilitary soldier kills 5 colleagues, self

PATNA, India (AP)—An Indian paramilitary soldier fatally shot five of his colleagues and later killed himself Wednesday in a firing incident in a camp in central India. State administrator Dinesh Kumar Nag said the incident occurred in Narayanpur district in Chhattisgarh state. What provoked the firing by the soldier is being investigated, said Vivek Kumar Pandey, a spokesman for the Indo-Tibetan Border Force. He said the soldiers were walking in a group when the shooting started. Those who tried to seize the weapon were gunned down by the soldier, he said. Pandey said five soldiers were killed on the spot and one of the three injured soldiers later died in a hospital. Earlier, reports said the soldiers shot at each other in Wednesday’s incident. Narayanpur is 225 kilometers (140 miles) south of Raipur, the state capital.

3 charged over Australia’s largest crystal meth seizure

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—Three people have been charged with drug offenses over Australia’s largest seizure of methamphetamine, which had been smuggled to Melbourne from Bangkok in stereo speakers. Police estimate the 1.596 metric tons (1.759 U.S. tons) of the drug also known as ice and crystal meth had a street value of AU$1.197 billion ($818 million). The 37 kilograms (82 pounds) of heroin also seized was the largest haul of that drug in Australia since 2017, a police statement said. Two men, aged 37 and 38, and a 37-year-old woman were appearing in a Melbourne court on Thursday charged with drug importation offenses that carry potential life prison sentences, police said. They have not been named. They were arrested after police executed search warrants on Wednesday at several Melbourne properties. Australian Border Force officers detected the haul in vacuum-sealed packages concealed in speakers at the Melbourne waterfront in April. A larger consignment of 1.728 metric tons (1.905 U.S. tons) of crystal meth bound for Australia was seized in California in January. Australian police said then it was the largest shipment of the drug bound for Australia and the largest ever domestic seizure in the United States. Australia is an attractive market for international drug traffickers because of the relatively high prices that Australian drug users are willing to pay.

HK residents living with tear gas worry of effects

HONG KONG (AP)—By day, the small commercial kitchen in a Hong Kong industrial building produces snacks. At night, it turns into a secret laboratory assembling a kit for pro-democracy protesters seeking to detox after repeated exposure to tear gas.

Volunteers seated around a kitchen island sort and pack multicolored pills into small resealable bags. At another table, a woman makes turmeric pills by dipping gelatin capsules into a shallow dish of the deep orange spice.

“Police have used so much tear gas and people are suffering,” said the owner of the kitchen, speaking on condition of anonymity because she fears repercussions for her business. “We want to especially help frontline protesters, who have put their lives on the line for the city.”

Hong Kong police have fired more than 10,000 tear gas canisters to quell violent protests that have rocked the city for six months. The movement’s demands include fully democratic elections and an investigation into police use of force, including tear gas.

Its heavy and prolonged use in Hong Kong — one of the world’s most densely populated cities and known for its concrete jungle of high-rises — is unusual and has sparked health fears.

While there’s no evidence of long-term health effects, it’s also largely untested territory.

“I don’t think there have been circumstances where there has been this level of repeated exposure for people to tear gas. What’s going on in Hong Kong is pretty unprecedented,” said Alistair Hay, a British toxicologist from the University of Leeds.

Police have fired it in cramped residential areas and near hospitals, malls and schools, affecting not only protesters but also children, the elderly and the sick.

Some worry that tear gas residue could stick for days or weeks to asphalt, walls, ventilation ducts and other places. Parents, schools and various community groups have demanded to know the chemical makeup of the gas — which police won’t divulge — so they can clean up properly.

In the absence of official information, some parents have stopped taking their kids to parks, and online tips urge mothers to refrain from breastfeeding for a few hours if they are exposed the gas. Many avoided fresh fruits after a wholesale market that supplies half of the city’s supply was gassed last month.

New daily rituals include using a baking soda solution to bathe, wash clothes and clean surfaces. Tips shared by protesters include not bathing in hot water after exposure as it is believed it will open pores and let the chemicals seep in.

The kitchen owner making detox kits said she wants to help protesters, who often avoid seeking treatment at hospitals to hide their identity and avoid possible arrest.

Europeans rap Iran for working on nuclear-capable missiles

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—France, Germany and the United Kingdom say “Iran’s developments of nuclear-capable ballistic missiles” go against a U.N. Security Council resolution calling on Tehran not to undertake any activity related to such missiles.

Ambassadors from the three European nations urged U.N. Secretary-General Antonio Guterres in a letter circulated Wednesday to inform the council in his next report that Iran’s ballistic missile activity is “inconsistent” with the call in a council resolution endorsing the 2015 nuclear deal with Iran.

The letter cites footage released on social media April 22, 2019, of a previously unseen flight test of a new Shahab-3 medium-range ballistic missile variant “equipped with a maneuverable re-entry vehicle.” It says: “The Shahab-3 booster used in the test is a Missile Technology Control Regime category-1 system and as such is technically capable of delivering a nuclear weapon.”

The Europeans noted that a 2015 report by the International Atomic Energy Agency on possible military dimensions of Iran’s nuclear program concluded “that extensive evidence indicated detailed Iranian research in 2002-2003 on arming the Shahab-3 with a nuclear warhead.”

Director General of International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Rafael Mariano Grossi from Argentina, gestures during an interview with The Associated Press at the International Center in Vienna, Austria, Tuesday, Dec. 3, 2019.

Officials in the Trump administration also have said Iran is working to obtain nuclear-capable missiles, something the Iranians deny.

U.S. President Donald

Trump withdrew from the nuclear agreement in May 2018. But it is still supported by the five other parties—France, Britain, Russia and China, which are all veto-wielding Security Council members, and Germany, which is currently serving a two-year term on the council.

The letter says “France, Germany and the United Kingdom assert once again our firm conclusion that Iran’s development of nuclear-capable ballistic missiles and related technologies is inconsistent” with the missile provision in the council resolution.

That provision urges Iran “not to undertake any activity related to ballistic missiles designed to be capable of delivering nuclear weapons.” But it does not require Tehran to halt such activity, and the Iranian government insists all its missile activities are legal and not nuclear-related.

The Europeans’ letter says they used the Missile Technology Control Regime “performance characteristics” that a rocket system would need to be capable of delivering at least a 500-kilogram payload to a range of at least 300 kilometers (185 miles) to be nuclear capable.

France, Germany and the UK gave four examples of “Iranian activity inconsistent” with the July 20, 2015 Security Council resolution endorsing the nuclear agreement, which was signed six days earlier:

In addition to the April 23 flight test of the new Shahab-3 missile variant, it cited:

■ The launch of the Boran-3, “a new liquid-propelled medium-range ballistic missile, traveling approximately 1,300 kilometers,” which was announced by Iranian-backed Houthi forces in Yemen on Aug. 2, 2019, and is an advancement of Iran’s Qiam-1 missile.

■ The July 24, 2019, launch of a ballistic missile that flew over 1,000 kilometers (620 miles), which media reports indicated was a test launch of a Shahab-3 medium-range missile.

■ The Aug. 29, 2019, attempted launch, reported by Iranian media, of a Safir satellite launch vehicle, which was unsuccessful. U.N. experts have said such launch vehicles share “a great deal of similar materials and technology” with ballistic missiles.

The Europeans’ letter says these activities “are the latest in a long series of advances in Iranian ballistic missile technology” and “furthermore, Iran continues its proliferation of ballistic missile technology in the region” in violation of Security Council resolution.

The Security Council has scheduled a Dec. 19 meeting to discuss implementation of the 2015 resolution on the Iran nuclear deal.

During last year’s meeting, U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo urged the council to again ban Iranian ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons and to maintain an arms embargo that is scheduled to be lifted in 2020 under the nuclear deal.

Mexican president prays with family of dead US dual citizens

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexican President Andrés Manuel López Obrador prayed for the safety of the country with the relatives of nine U.S. dual citizens slaughtered in northern Mexico last month and assured them “at least four” suspects have been detained, a family member said.

Julian LeBaron said that during the family’s Monday meeting with López Obrador and his Cabinet at Mexico City’s National Palace, the president pledged to visit the region where the Nov. 4 massacre took place.

Mexican politicians traditionally avoid open displays of faith, and López Obrador has been unusual in recent comments referring to himself as a “follower of Jesus Christ.”

“We just bowed our heads” and “prayed for the president and the country, for peace and goodwill, and to protect our loved ones, and protect our country,” LeBaron said Tuesday.

The extended LeBaron family has lived in northern Mexico for decades and identify as part of the Mormon tradition though they are not affiliated with the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints. Dual nationals, they were hotly criticized by some for asking U.S. President Donald Trump to designate Mexican drug cartels as terrorist organizations, something Trump said he would do.

“We think we should all be humble enough, and that’s something we discussed with the president, to recognize that we have an immense problem on our hands and we need help,” LeBaron said. “Of course, we wouldn’t like to see a military invasion.”

Three young mothers and six children were killed in the attack near the border of the northern states of Sonora and Chihuahua. Officials have said a drug cartel is suspected in the attack, but they initially suggested that one of the mothers’ vehicles was set afire unintentionally, when a bullet hit the gas tank.

LeBaron said officials have confirmed to them that the killers filmed the attack themselves and set fire to the SUV in which one mother—LeBaron’s cousin—and her four children died. He said family members have seen the video.

LeBaron is now trying to press for the kind of local anti-crime organizing that his community in Chihuahua state put together in 2009 after a previous attack by drug cartel gunmen.

He envisions communities allowed to form a posse, deputize citizens and bear arms to fight cartel incursions.

“We’ve been invaded by criminal terrorist organizations within our own country, within our own communities, and our government has absolutely failed to stop the thugs,” said LeBaron. “At some point we have to assume responsibility as citizens to put a stop to it.”

“The whole western United States was basically built on a structure that worked for communities, what we call the Wild West was never the wild West,” he said. “Within the community they basically had all the powers to hold people accountable. The whole town could be deputized to bring criminals before justice.”

UN says 58 migrants dead as boat capsizes off Mauritania

DAKAR, Senegal (AP)—At least 58 people are dead after a boat carrying dozens of migrants capsized in the Atlantic Ocean off the West African nation of Mauritania, the U.N. migration agency said Wednesday. It said 83 people swam to shore.

It was one of the deadliest disasters this year among migrants trying to make the perilous journey to Europe.

The boat carrying at least 150 people had been low on fuel while approaching Mauritania, the International Organization for Migration said in a statement. Survivors were being helped by Mauritanian authorities in the northern city of Nouadhibou, the U.N. agency said.

Survivors said the boat, with women and children on board, had left Gambia on Nov. 27.

An unknown number of injured were taken to the hospital in Nouadhibou.

“The Mauritanian authorities are very efficiently coordinating the response with the agencies currently present in Nouadhibou,” said Laura Lungarotti, chief of mission in Mauritania with the migration agency.

There was no immediate statement from authorities in Gambia, a small West African nation from which many migrants set off in hopes of reaching Europe.

Despite Gambia’s small size, more than 35,000 Gambian migrants arrived in Europe between 2014 and 2018, according to the U.N. migration agency.

A 22-year oppressive rule by then President Yahya Jammeh severely affected the country’s economy, especially for Gambia’s youth, and contributed greatly to the surplus of migrants hoping to get to Europe or elsewhere.

Since Jammeh was voted out in 2016 and fled into exile in January 2017, European countries have been pushing to return asylum seekers. But Gambia’s economy still suffers.

The coastal nation was shaken earlier this year by the collapse of British travel company Thomas Cook. At the time, Gambia’s tourism minister said the government convened an emergency meeting on the collapse, while some Gambians said the shutdown could have a devastating impact on tourism, which contributes more than 30% of the country’s GDP.

Cats to be put on leashes to protect wildlife? EU says no

BRUSSELS (AP)—Put domestic cats on a leash to better protect threatened birds and the environment? The European Union says that would deny mankind's furry friend its unalienable right to roam.

The EU's executive said Thursday that it is "a strong defender of free movement rights — including of cats" and "categorically" denied it would ever force cats to be kept indoors or on a leash, as one scientific study suggests.

Tilburg University scientists wrote in Oxford's Journal of Environmental Law that free-ranging domestic cats "impact biodiversity through predation, disturbance, competition, disease and hybridization," and added that the predatory impact is worse than often assumed.

They argued that EU laws and directives could effectively force owners to keep them indoors or on a leash outdoors.

Electric eel powers aquarium's Christmas lights

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—Visitors to the Tennessee Aquarium may be shocked to learn that an electric eel named Miguel Wattson is lighting up a Christmas tree.

A special system connected to Miguel's tank enables his shocks to power strands of lights on a nearby tree, according to a news release.

Miguel releases low-voltage blips of electricity when he is trying to find food, aquarist Kimberly Hurt said.

That translates to a rapid, dim blinking of the Christmas lights. When he is eating or excited he emits higher voltage shocks which cause bigger flashes.

Wattson has his own Twitter account where he shares tweets generated by his sparky self, courtesy of coding by Tennessee Tech University's iCube center.

"They combined electrical engineering and emerging business communication to give the eel a voice," center director Kevin Liska previously said in a aquarium statement.

In between Miguel's tweets boasting statements like "SHAZAM!!!!" and "ka-BLAMEROO!!!!," a video posted to the account shows Miguel shaking in his tank as lights on the nearby tree sputter on and off.

The aquarium hopes the Christmas tree will spark love and appreciation for the unusual freshwater fish.

Hospital sends $3K bill for pulling toy from girl's nose

LAS VEGAS (AP)—A Las Vegas mother says she received a $3,000 bill after doctors removed a plastic doll shoe stuck in her 3-year-old daughter's nose. KTNV-TV reported Tuesday that Lucy Branson stuck two pink Polly Pocket plastic doll shoes up her nose -- one in each nostril. Her mother Katy Branson says she was able to remove one of the shoes but even urgent care couldn't reach the second shoe. Branson says she then took her daughter to Dignity Health St. Rose Dominican Siena Campus in Henderson where physicians used a tweezer-like tool to successfully remove the shoe in seconds. The Branson family says they initially received a bill for $3,000 but the charge was reduced to $1,700 because of a high deductible medical policy.

Man using magnet fishes WWI-era grenade from Michigan river

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—A magnet-wielding angler has fished a World War I-era grenade from a western Michigan river. WOOD-TV reports the angler found the explosive Tuesday after dangling the magnet from a bridge in the Grand River in Grand Rapids. Joseph Alexander told the television station he "thought it looked like a grenade, but not one" he'd seen before. Alexander said he posted photos of it online and people commented that it was a grenade and he should call police. Grand Rapids police say the device is a "German Granatenwerfer" and that it will be stored until detonated safely. Sgt. John Wittkowski said since the device was so old and had been submerged for a long time it likely was no longer very dangerous. Alexander said magnet fishing is a hobby.

Police: Man called out of work drunk, tried to rob workplace

OAKWOOD, Ga. (AP)—Police in Georgia say a man called out of his Steak 'n Shake job because he was "intoxicated," then showed up anyway and demanded money while holding a co-worker at gunpoint. The Gainesville Times reports 20-year-old Kentarias Gowans, of Flowery Branch, is charged with offenses including aggravated assault. Oakwood Police investigator Todd Templeton says Gowans called out on Thanksgiving, went to the restaurant that night, held a gun to a co-worker's head and demanded money. Police say responding officers arrived to see employees running from the business, which had customers at the time. Police say an apparently still intoxicated Gowans briefly raised the gun at officers before dropping it. He was arrested after a brief struggle during which a stun gun was used. It's unclear if Gowans has a lawyer.

Cashier-less stores?

By BRITTANY MEILING
THE SAN DIEGO UNION-TRIBUNE

SAN DIEGO—A technology startup in San Diego has just raised $30 million from investors to continue building out its software for cashier-less, "grab-and-go" stores. The model, popularized by Amazon Go, allows shoppers to simply walk into a store, grab items from the shelves, and walk out—with the receipt sent directly to their mobile device.

The startup, Accel Robotics, is developing computer vision software—along with cameras, sensors and store equipment—to make this concept work. In fact, the startup can build out an entire modular store for its customers, pre-loaded with the computer brains to enable a "checkout-free" experience.

The new money came in a round led by Japanese funding giant SoftBank, with further participation from New Ground Ventures, Toyo Kanetsu Corporate Venture Investment Partnership and RevTech Ventures.

Co-founder and CEO Brandon Maseda said Accel Robotics already has its technology deployed in North America and Japan, including at restaurants and drug store chains. However, Maseda was slim on specifics, saying he couldn't reveal who his customers were just yet. Broadly, the company plans to create stores from scratch—and partner with existing retailers—to help bring small-format stores to locations that couldn't accommodate larger buildings. Think university campuses, corporate offices and office parks, military bases, airports and other travel hubs.

"The idea is to deliver small, modular stores closer to where people live and work," Maseda said.

Accel Robotics was founded in 2015 and was incubated early on by San Diego's tech accelerator EvoNexus, along with a Texas-based incubator RevTech Ventures. This new capital is in addition to $7 million previously raised, bringing its total capital to $37 million.

The startup was founded by Maseda, along with Marius Buibas, Brain Corp.'s former director of engineering; and Martin Cseh, a Harvard University graduate. Just a couple of years ago, the three founders were working out of a tiny glass office in EvoNexus with only two employees. Today, they have an office in San Diego's Kearny Mesa neighborhood, where they employ 40 people. The startup also has offices in Argentina and Tokyo, employing a total of 60 people.

Risks of upgrading to Windows 10

Q: Dell's website says that my six-year-old Windows 7 laptop (an Inspiron 5521) was tested and found compatible with the earliest versions of Windows 10 (called build 1507 and build 1511.) But it isn't listed as being tested with newer versions. How risky is it for me to upgrade to the latest version of Windows 10? Or should I go for an older version?

A: There's no clear-cut answer for whether you should upgrade your Windows 7 PC to Windows 10. Here's why:

■ You can't upgrade to the older versions of Windows 10 that you know are compatible with your PC, because they've been discontinued and pose a significant risk. A PC using Windows 10 "build 1507" or "build 1511" no longer gets security updates.

■ Upgrading to the current version of Windows 10 ("build 1909" introduced in November), is a bit risky because Dell hasn't tested your computer with it. I suspect that Dell has simply quit testing older PC models for Windows 10 compatibility. That said, there's no certainty how well the latest version of Windows 10 will work.

As a result, I have to fall back on some standard advice: Upgrading any PC that is six years old isn't a great idea, because technology

TECH Q&A

Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

Steve Alexander covers technology for the Minneapolis Star Tribune. Readers may write to him at Tech Q&A, 425 Portland Ave. S., Minneapolis, Minn. 55488-0002; email: steve.j.alexander@gmail.com. Please include a full name, city and phone number.

keeps changing and the PC doesn't. Even if your older PC works with the current version of Windows 10, a future Microsoft update to the operating system might cause problems. And there are likely to be updates to "build 1909" before Microsoft discontinues it (for consumers) in May 2021.

Because of the uncertainty about whether you should upgrade your PC, it would be less risky to buy a new Windows 10 computer.

Q: I'm having problems using a Canon printer-scanner with a Lenovo model N21 Chromebook. I've lost the margins on documents and web pages that I've printed with the Chromebook, and I haven't been able to use the scanner at all. What's wrong?

A: A Chromebook, which is a computer that runs Google's Chrome operating system, doesn't work with a Canon printer-scanner the same way a Windows PC or a Mac would (by downloading an app.) Printing must be set up using Chromebook internal software, and scanning only works if you have the right Canon model.

A Chromebook connects to a printer in one of three ways: Directly using a USB cable; over your home Wi-Fi network; or via a service called "Google Cloud Print" that sends documents to your wireless printer over the internet. The USB cable and home Wi-Fi methods are considered the most reliable (see setup directions at tinyurl.com/yy9gj2yy). The Google Cloud Print service (see setup directions at tinyurl.com/qvt5jtb) will be discontinued in December 2020 (see tinyurl.com/vb377fc). Note that only some Canon printers are compatible with Google Cloud Print (see a list at tinyurl.com/w9z5r4n).

Scanning requires a different setup. You need a scanner that can upload a scanned image to Google Drive, an internet-based storage service. Once the image is uploaded, the Chromebook can retrieve it from Google Drive. However, Canon offers only a few printer-scanners that can access Google Drive (see tinyurl.com/t6zfuyj).

This image released by Netflix shows Henry Cavill in a scene from "The Witcher," premiering on Netflix on Dec. 20.

Door 'hasn't closed' on Superman, but first, 'Witcher'

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Henry Cavill is all in on his Netflix fantasy series "The Witcher," but he says the "door hasn't closed" on a return as Superman in the DC cinematic universe.

Cavill last played the superhero in 2017's "Justice League" and it's unclear whether any upcoming movies will feature the character. There are several films based on DC superheroes in the works, including sequels to "Wonder Woman" and "Aquaman."

Cavill dons a long white wig to play monster hunter Geralt of Rivia in "The Witcher," an ambitious eight-episode adaptation of Polish author Andrzej Sapkowski's books. With intense magic, scheming political factions and epic battles, it's targeting the audiences that made "Game of Thrones" a worldwide phenomenon.

"I live in the fantasy genre anyway, that's my hobby. And so for me, it was always—it was always obvious. It was like yes, of course, these shows can be popular," Cavill said. "It was always a target. I always wanted to bring things like this to the screen in one way, shape or form."

The show premieres on Netflix on Dec. 20, and production begins early next year on a second season.

The series features Cavill's Geralt engaging in intricately choreographed swordplay, relaxing in a bath and talking to his horse—all recognizable moments for fans of the acclaimed hit 2015 role-playing game "The Witcher 3." Cavill says his horse chats recalled his real-life dialogue with his American Akita dog Kal, who shows up regularly on his Instagram feed.

"That's exactly what I was channeling when I was interacting with Roach (the horse), it was 100 percent the relationship Kal and I have," he said. "Geralt may be a little harder. Generally, he's been living in a harsher world and hated by a lot of people for longer than I have."

Cavill was a fan of "The Witcher 3" before he landed the series. He says he imagined himself in the role while playing the game, which runs for dozens of hours.

Rapper T.I.'s remarks spark NY bill to end virginity tests

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—New York could bar doctors from performing so-called virginity tests under legislation prompted by the rapper T.I.'s controversial claim that he has a gynecologist check his daughter's hymen annually.

Assemblywoman Michaelle Solages said Tuesday the bill she submitted last month would prohibit medical professionals from performing or supervising such examinations, though it's unclear how common they are in the U.S. New York would also consider it sexual assault when such tests are performed outside of a medical setting.

"It's medically unnecessary," the Democrat said. "It's often painful, humiliating, traumatic. All in all, it's a form of violence against women."

Her bill has attracted support from three Democratic lawmakers, and Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo's administration officials called the practice "disturbing." Solages said no other states have such bans.

The World Health Organization, U.N. Women and the U.N. Human Rights office called for the end of the tests worldwide last year. They said the testing often involves inspecting the hymen or inserting fingers into the vagina.

T.I., also known as Clifford Joseph Harris, Jr., drew criticism when he said in a November episode of the podcast "Ladies like Us" that he asked a gynecologist to check his teenage daughter's hymen shortly after her birthday each year. She is now 18.

"I put a sticky note on the door: 'Gyno. Tomorrow. 9:30,'" Harris said.

After his comments prompted backlash on social media, he told Jada Pinkett Smith on the Facebook interview show Red Table Talk he'd been exaggerating and that "he was never in any exam room."

Gabrielle Union, NBC meet over 'America's Got Talent' firing

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Gabrielle Union and NBC both said Wednesday that they have had a "productive" first conversation on her firing from "America's Got Talent" and her allegations that she was removed over her complaints about racism and other troubling on-set behavior.

"We had a lengthy 5-hour, and what I thought to be, productive meeting yesterday," Union said on Twitter. "I was able to, again, express my unfiltered truth. I led with transparency and my desire and hope for real change."

NBC said in a statement that the "initial conversation was candid and productive. While there will be a further investigation to get a deeper understanding of the facts, we are working with Gabrielle to come to a positive resolution."

Union's attorney Bryan Freedman said Tuesday's meeting, which included representatives from Fremantle, the show's production company, was a good start.

"We're waiting to see the next steps on whether NBC is going to make sure that there are real changes made to protect both the contestants and the talent," Freedman said.

Union, an actress best known for her roles in films including "Bring It On" and "Bad Boys II," was a judge on the talent showcase but she and fellow judge Julianne Hough were not asked to return after their first season.

Variety subsequently reported that Union, who is black, believed she was fired because she had asked NBC and the show's producers to address an environment that tolerated racist jokes and remarks, including what she said were multiple notes from producers saying she was wearing her hair "too black" for the "America's Got Talent" audience.

NEW YORK (AP)—In these uneasy times, as we move along to a new decade, the Pantone Color Institute has reached back in time to calming, confident Classic Blue as its color of the year for 2020.

The color is an anchor offering stability, constancy and connection, said Laurie Pressman, vice president of the global purveyors of color consulting, trendspotting and analysis.

"It's a reassuring presence," she told The Associated Press ahead of Wednesday's reveal.

Akin to maritime blue—not indigo and brighter than navy—Classic Blue evokes a feeling of vast expanse, Pressman said of the shade also known as Pantone 19-4052.

Pressman and her team scoured the worlds of art, fashion and home decor, along with commercial, graphic and industrial design, to come up with the pick, as they have since Cerulean became the inaugural color of the year for the milestone 2000.

But Classic Blue isn't just about nostalgia, she said. Creators around the globe are putting out modern takes for runways, mobile phones, kitchen appliances and the paint of pricey, forward-looking cars and motorcycles.

At Wednesday's launch event, Pressman insisted the color was in no way a nod to the hue associated with the Democratic Party, though she knew the question would surface.

"This was not a political move for us. This is global. We do not look at color through a political lens. We look at our life through a colorful lens," she told the AP.

Kid Rock's Detroit eatery closing

DETROIT (AP)—A Kid Rock-owned restaurant in Detroit's Little Caesars Arena will close once its licensing agreement expires this spring, the singer and arena operator announced separately Wednesday.

The severing of ties between the suburban Detroit-born musician and Ilitch Holdings came days after video surfaced showing Kid Rock ranting against Oprah Winfrey, though neither party tied the parting to the video or the backlash that followed. The split also points to a widening estrangement between Kid Rock and the city he calls home.

"I appreciate all who have patronized our place and still have much love for the city of Detroit and the people/organizations that I have helped there for years, black, white, whatever, but learned long ago, go where you're celebrated, not tolerated," he wrote Wednesday on Facebook.

Kid Rock's Made in Detroit opened in 2017 in Little Caesars Arena, which is home to the NHL's Red Wings and the NBA's Detroit Pistons.

Chris Granger, group president of sports and entertainment for Ilitch Holdings, said in a statement that Kid Rock "voluntarily decided" not to renew the deal for the restaurant that expires in April. He said the Ilitch organization has been in contact with the musician.

The Ilitch statement said its "venues are open, inviting, inclusive and respectful to all."

A spokesman for Kid Rock didn't immediately reply to a message seeking comment.

Born Robert Ritchie, Kid Rock grew up in Macomb County, which is just north of Detroit. He performs hip-hop, hard rock, country and Southern rock music.

Apparent cellphone video obtained by TMZ shows Ritchie onstage last month at his steakhouse in Nashville, Tennessee, using graphic language to convey his dislike of Winfrey and Joy Behar, one of the hosts of the ABC talk show "The View."

The video later shows Ritchie -- who appeared to be sitting on the edge of the stage -- being lifted up by security or police officers.

'The Irishman' named best picture by New York Film Critics

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Film Critics Circle named "The Irishman" the year's best film on Wednesday, handing Martin Scorsese's mob epic its second such honor in two days.

It's the second time Scorsese has received the top award from his hometown's critics following 1990's "GoodFellas." They also named him best director in 2006 for "The Departed."

The win added more momentum to the awards-season campaign for "The Irishman," which on Tuesday was also named best film by the National Board of Review. The New York critics additionally bestowed best supporting actor on Joe Pesci's performance in the film.

If "The Irishman" were to go all the way, it would give Netflix its first best picture Academy Award. The New York critics last year chose another Netflix title, Alfonso Cuarón's "Roma," as its best film.

The critics selected Lupita Nyong'o ("Us") for best actress and Antonio Banderas ("Pain & Glory") for best actor. Laura Dern was named best supporting actress for her performance in both Noah Baumbach's "Marriage Story" and Greta Gerwig's "Little Women."

Best director went to a pair of native New Yorkers: Josh and Benny Safdie, whose upcoming "Uncut Gems" stars Adam Sandler as a dealer in Manhattan's diamond district.

The New York Film Critics Circle, founded in 1935, will hand out the awards for their 85th ceremony on Jan. 7. The group added two special awards for composer Randy Newman, who scored both "Marriage Story" and "Toy Story 4" this year, and the indie film preservation nonprofit IndieCollect.

The rest of their winners are:
Best Non-Fiction Film: "Honeyland"

Best Screenplay: "Once Upon a Time ... in Hollywood"

Best Cinematography: Claire Mathon for "Portrait of a Lady on Fire"

Best Foreign Language Film: "Parasite"

Best Animated Film: "I Lost My Body"

Chris Brown must give up monkeys under judge's restrictions

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Los Angeles judge on Wednesday said Chris Brown must give up all rights to his former pet monkey, pay for its care and not try to buy a new one if he wants charges of illegal animal ownership dropped.

The 30-year-old singer was allowed to enter a diversion program nearly a year after he was charged with two misdemeanors over his possession of a pet capuchin monkey without a permit.

Brown must permanently forfeit his rights to the monkey, named Fiji, pay $35,000 to the facility where it is now being housed, and refrain from trying to visit it without making special arrangements.

He also must not own any other prohibited species, and submit to searches to prove he isn't.

If Brown meets the conditions, the charges will be dropped in June.

Brown posted a picture to his 44 million Instagram followers in early 2018 showing his daughter cuddling with the capuchin, named Fiji.

California fish and wildlife agents took the monkey away soon after.

Brown is also prohibited from breaking the law in any other way during the span.

He has had several highly publicized run-ins with law enforcement in the decade since he pleaded guilty to the felony assault of his then-girlfriend Rihanna, for which he served five years' probation.

AFI names 'Joker,' 'Jojo' among top 10 films of the year

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Film Institute on Wednesday named its top 10 movies of the year, including Todd Phillips' comic-book sensation "Joker," Taika Waititi's World War II romp "Jojo Rabbit" and Lulu Wang's family drama "The Farewell."

The AFI's other top movies of the year are: the Sam

Mendes World War I thriller "1917," Martin Scorsese's crime epic "The Irishman," Rian Johnson's star-studded whodunit "Knives Out," Greta Gerwig's Louisa May Alcott adaptation "Little Women," Noah Baumbach's divorce drama "Marriage Story," Quentin Tarantino's Los Angeles fable "Once Upon a

Time ... In Hollywood" and Clint Eastwood's Atlanta Olympics bombing docudrama "Richard Jewell."

The AFI, which only cites American films, added a special award for the Korean thriller "Parasite."

The AFI Awards, now in its 20th year, will be celebrated at a luncheon Jan. 3 in Los Angeles.

Lady Gaga to headline pre-Super Bowl concert in Miami

NEW YORK (AP)—Lady Gaga is returning to the Super Bowl stage—sort of.

The pop star will perform at AT&T TV Super Saturday Night in Miami on Feb. 1, held a day before Super Bowl 54. The concert will take place at Meridian at Island Gardens and will be livestreamed at twitter.com/ItsOnATT.

Gaga headlined the Super Bowl halftime show in 2017 and she performed the national anthem at Super Bowl 50 in 2016. Jennifer Lopez and Shakira will headline this year's halftime show, which will take place on Feb. 2 at Hard Rock Stadium in Miami Gardens, Florida.

AT&T TV Super Saturday Night was previously called DIRECTV Super Saturday Night, which launched in 2011 and has featured high-profile performers like Jay-Z, Rihanna, Justin Timberlake, Taylor Swift, Kanye West, Katy Perry and Lopez.

Willie Nelson says he's not smoking, but is still using pot

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Willie Nelson may have given up smoking, but he hasn't stopped using marijuana.

While in San Antonio last week for two performances, the 86-year-old country music legend told KSAT TV that in an effort to take better care of himself, he no longer smokes.

Nelson, a longtime marijuana advocate, said he "started smoking cedar bark, went from that to cigarettes to whatever."

Nelson, who owns a company that sells marijuana products, says: "I have abused my lungs quite a bit in the past, so breathing is a little more difficult these days and I have to be careful."

His spokeswoman, Elaine Shock, told The Associated Press in an email Wednesday that Nelson hasn't given up cannabis, and she points out there are different ways to consume it.

"That said," she said "Willie does what he wants, when he wants, when it comes to smoking."

One thing though Nelson won't be giving up is touring.

"I love the bus," he said. "This is my home."

Lonely husband gives more than he's getting from wife

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I married in our early 40s. I have given my all to her, but I have always felt underappreciated.

I always wanted to be a father, but she didn't want to have kids. After we were together for a few years, she changed her mind, so we decided to try for a child and were surprised to discover after only a week of trying that we were pregnant. A few months ago, we were blessed with our beautiful, healthy daughter.

My wife had difficulty with breastfeeding, so she decided to stop and solely bottle-feed. I have been supportive of her decision, but she still feels sad and guilty about it. I have done all I can to encourage and comfort her, but she just brushes me off.

I love my wife with all that I am, but I don't feel loved in return. Since we started dating, she has always called me "Babe." Now she calls me by my first name. I tell her I love her every day, but she hasn't said it back since the baby was born. She also doesn't say goodnight when she goes to bed.

We haven't kissed in almost two months. I receive no affection from her; she never even touches me. I don't care about not having sex, but she won't even touch my arm or try to hold my hand. I feel alone and lonely in my own home. What can I do to change things?

HEARTSICK HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: Tell your wife what you have written. She may be feeling overwhelmed and exhausted from taking care of a brand-new baby, or suffer from a common condition called postpartum depression. (It's sometimes referred to as the "baby blues" for a reason.) Urge her to discuss how she has been feeling with her OB/GYN because, with medical help, the condition is treatable. Please don't wait because the sooner this is dealt with, the better it will be for all three of you.

DEAR ABBY: I recently housesat for a friend and her family while they were on vacation because they needed someone to water their plants and take out their dog. Cleaning is a favorite pastime of mine, so while I was there, I did some tidying up. I did not enter any of their bedrooms and only did small tasks such as vacuum and mop the common areas. I genuinely thought I was being considerate by going above and beyond.

When they returned, they seemed shocked and even slightly offended, and made jokes about how I must think they are messy. At the time, it seemed fine, but I understand now it may have been misinterpreted.

Did I cross a boundary, and should I avoid doing this in the future? How should I apologize? I feel terrible for offending them.

Phillies lure Wheeler away from rival Mets

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies filled their biggest need quickly.

Right-hander Zack Wheeler and the Phillies agreed to a $118 million, five-year contract, two people familiar with the deal told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Both people spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because the agreement, which is subject to a successful physical, had not been announced.

The 29-year-old Wheeler stays in the NL East after spending his first seven seasons with the New York Mets. He was 11-8 with a 3.96 ERA last season after going 12-7 with a 3.31 ERA in 2018. Wheeler missed the 2015 and 2016 seasons following Tommy John surgery.

He will join a rotation led by Aaron Nola that also includes Jake Arrieta. The Phillies may pursue another front-line starter—Stephen Strasburg, perhaps—to join a staff that has Zach Eflin, Vince Velasquez and Nick Pivetta.

“He knows all of us hitters very well,” Mets role player J.D. Davis said earlier in the day. “He’s a great pitcher, great stuff. I only wish the best for him.”

Wheeler chose less money to stay on the East Coast. The Chicago White Sox offered Wheeler a five-year contract worth more than $120 million guaranteed, a person with direct knowledge of those negotiations said. That person spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the situation.

Philadelphia spent big money last season on free-agent outfielders Bryce Harper and Andrew McCutchen and acquired catcher J.T. Realmuto and short-stop Jean Segura in trades. The Phillies didn’t address starting pitching, and the staff’s struggles cost them in the second half as they faded to an 81-81 finish. Manager Gabe Kapler was fired and replaced by Joe Girardi.

Wheeler is 44-38 with a 3.77 ERA in 126 starts. He has 726 strikeouts in 749 1/3 innings.

“He’s a great pitcher, but this whole division is stacked with pitchers,” Mets outfielder Brandon Nimmo said. “It’s just going to be tough day in and day out.”

Hamels to Braves

In Atlanta, Alex Anthopoulos believes Cole Hamels can help the Atlanta Braves win big in next season—and help the team’s young starters have more success for years to come.

Hamels, who turns 36 this month, agreed Wednesday to an $18 million, one-year contract with the busy Braves, one of the more active teams this offseason.

Anthopoulos said young Braves starters Max Fried and Mike Soroka will benefit from Hamels’ 14 seasons in the majors.

“How you quantify that is hard, but I think there is real value,” Anthopoulos said. “We’re signing Cole first and foremost because we think he’s going to help us win a lot of games ... and hopefully get to the World Series. No doubt in my mind ... I think Max Fried will get better just by seeing him and being around him. I think Soroka will get better.”

The Braves have won two straight NL East division titles but failed to win a playoff series.

Hamels said the Braves “were one of six teams I was really following and really rooting for” in free agency. He said Anthopoulos, the Braves general manager, was the first to initiate serious discussions.

“I reward the first team that actually does what they say they’re doing,” Hamels said, adding when a financial agreement was reached “boom, we were there and it was going to happen.”

Hamels said he is impressed by the Braves’ young talent.

“I’ve always been following them in hopes of maybe having an opportunity to pitch with some of those guys,” he said. “... I think what I can provide might be beneficial.”

Anthopoulos said he had interest in Hamels before the 2018 season, when the pitcher signed with the Cubs, and again last year, before Chicago exercised a team option.

$100M for Bumgarner?

The free-agent pitching market broke wide open Wednesday, but the biggest winner of the day might be Madison Bumgarner.

With the Philadelphia Phillies signing Wheeler and the Braves landing Hamels, those two teams are now out of the market now for Bumgarner, according to two executives familiar with the clubs’ thinking.

Yet, two club officials said that Bumgarner’s value is soaring in the aftermath of the deals, and expect him to command at least $100 million in free agency. He’s widely considered the third-best remaining free-agent starter behind Gerrit Cole and Stephen Strasburg.

“I wouldn’t even be surprised if he gets more than Wheeler,” one NL official said. “It will be close. There’s really not that big of a difference when you look at it closely.”

Bumgarner, 30, is a year older, and while he may not have the same upside as Wheeler, the former Met doesn’t have Bumgarner’s resume. Wheeler has made more than 30 starts just once, has never thrown 200 innings and missed the entire 2015 and 2016 seasons following Tommy John surgery.

Bumgarner is a World Series hero, leading the San Francisco Giants to three titles, and is a four-time All-Star with three top-six Cy Young finishes. He has eclipsed 200 innings seven times in his career, including 2019, when he went 9-9 with a 3.90 ERA with 207 2/3 innings. The only two years he failed to pitch 200 innings were 2017 and 2018, both seasons cut short by freak injuries.

Bumgarner won three World Series titles with the Giants.

Most importantly to suitors, Bumgarner is pitching the best he has in three years. In 2019, he posted his highest strikeout percentage since 2016 and his lowest walk percentage since 2015.

It’s unknown exactly who will be bidding on Bumgarner, but the teams that lost out in the Wheeler sweepstakes would be the logical candidates. The Chicago White Sox, Minnesota Twins, Cincinnati Reds and Houston Astros all pursued Wheeler. The Los Angeles Angels, Toronto Blue Jays and Texas Rangers also could be in the mix

Woodland, Reed share lead at Hero

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)—As a player, Tiger Woods wasn’t all that happy with his game Wednesday in the Hero World Challenge. As the Presidents Cup captain, he had reason to be pleased.

U.S. Open champion Gary Woodland and Patrick Reed, who will be part of the U.S. team next week at Royal Melbourne, each managed a tough wind in the Bahamas to post a 6-under 66 and share the lead after the opening round of a tournament that felt more like a Presidents Cup tune-up.

Woods used two of his four captain’s picks on Woodland and Reed.

He used another on himself, and showed plenty of rust in his first tournament since Woods won the Zozo Championship in Japan the last week of October.

Woods made sloppy bogeys on both par 5s on the front nine. He hit his stride on the back nine with a five-hole stretch he played in 5-under par, chipping in for eagle on the par-5 15th. That put him within three of the lead right up until he chopped his way to a bogey-double bogey finish for a 72.

“It was not a very good start,” Woods said. “Didn’t play the par 5s well early and then got it going on the back nine a little bit. Got myself right there in the mix and then bad shots on 17, 18.”

Woods has 11 of his 12 players for the Presidents Cup at his holiday exhibition, and it was clear what kind of pairings he had in mind for the matches that start Dec. 12 at Royal Melbourne.

He played with Justin Thomas, who had a 69. Reed played with Patrick Cantlay, his partner in the team event in New Orleans each of the last three years. Woodland played with Xander Schauffele, while Bryson DeChambeau was paired with Webb Simpson and Rickie Fowler played with Tony Finau.

Matt Kuchar had a successful partnership with Dustin Johnson in two Ryder Cups.

Johnson is not in the Bahamas, withdrawing last week to give his left knee one more week to get ready for the matches. Kuchar instead played with Chez Reavie, who replaced Johnson in the Bahamas.

Woods didn’t reveal any insight into his plans for next week, only that he wants open communication.

“I want to have all the players comfortable with who they’re playing with,” Woods said. “That’s why we’re communicating the way we are, so every guy has an understanding of when they’re playing, what format they’re playing, who they’re playing with, the different options that could happen based on conditions, based on people’s form.

“Got to have all those different contingencies ready to go.”

Only 10 players from the 18-man field of players from the top 50 managed to break par on a course that typically allows for good scoring. The wind was strong and from the opposite direction, so strong that Woodland hit 5-iron into the par-4 18th, which typically is a short iron.

He even considered the wind while putting.

“Sometimes it’s better to miss the green than be in the middle of the green putting downwind,” Woodland said. “We tried to play into the wind all day today, and we did that. We controlled the golf ball enough where we did that and gave ourselves a lot of chances.”

Bucks top Pistons, extend winning streak to 13

DETROIT (AP)—Giannis Antetokounmpo was ready to go toe to toe with Blake Griffin during a second-quarter flareup between division rivals Milwaukee and Detroit.

The game was turning contentious. It wouldn't stay close for long.

"They're just a great defensive team and just play really physical," Antetokounmpo said. "They want to be physical, they want to be dirty. They want you to get out of your game, and whenever you come in Detroit, you expect that."

Antetokounmpo scored 35 points to lift the Bucks to their 13th consecutive victory, 127-103 over the Pistons on Wednesday night. The last time the Bucks had a longer winning streak than this was when they won 16 in a row spanning the end of the 1972-73 season and the beginning of 1973-74. They also had a 13-game run shortly after that 16-game streak ended.

Milwaukee won all eight matchups with the Pistons last season — four in the regular season and four in the first round of the playoffs. The Bucks also beat Detroit last month in their first meeting of 2019-20.

There were six technical fouls in this game, and there were words exchanged during a couple mild altercations. The first involved Antetokounmpo and Griffin after those two collided around midcourt in the second quarter.

"There's going to be a lot of teams that are going to come out and try to be physical with me—try to hit me, knock me down to the floor," Antetokounmpo said. "I just got to keep my composure."

In the third quarter, Antetokounmpo fell to the ground after being fouled, and then Griffin stepped over him. Milwaukee's Khris Middleton came over to confront Griffin. Three technicals were assessed after that.

"That's going to happen. In a competitive game, it's going to happen," Pistons coach Dwane Casey said. "If anything, that should get you more focused, more riled up, more ready to play, more ready to compete and more ready to be physical and finish at the rim. All those things you have to do in a competitive game like that, a physical game like that."

The Bucks went on a 13-2 run late in the second quarter to lead 57-39, and although Detroit closed within 11 at the half, the Pistons never made a major run during the final two quarters. Antetokounmpo scored 12 points in the third, and Milwaukee led 92-72 after three.

"I liked our fire in the second quarter. I liked our fire in general," Bucks coach Mike Budenholzer said. "I think the guys, they're in a good place. They're playing good basketball. So we'll keep it going."

Andre Drummond had 23 points and 14 rebounds for Detroit. Middleton had 17 points for the Bucks.

Lakers 121, Jazz 96

In Salt Lake City, Anthony Davis scored 26 points, LeBron James had 20 points and 12 assists and Los Angeles routed Utah.

Rajon Rondo added 14 points and a season-high 12 assists and season-high nine rebounds. Los Angeles cruised to an easy victory, outscoring Utah 32-5 in fast-break points and totaling 21 points off 19 Jazz turnovers.

Donovan Mitchell scored 29 points and Bojan Bogdanovic added 23 to lead Utah. The Jazz lost for the fifth time in six games.

Mavericks 121, Timberwolves 114

In Dallas, Dwight Powell had 24 points on 9-for-9 shooting from the field, Jalen Brunson ignited a fourth-quarter rally with 14 of his 16 points in the period and the Mavericks beat Minnesota.

Powell and Brunson both had season highs as the Mavericks overcame a subpar outing by Luka Doncic to win for the ninth time in 10 games. Doncic finished with 22 points, seven rebounds and six assists after picking up a technical foul in the third quarter and seeing his team rally with most of its starters on the bench.

Karl-Anthony Towns and Andrew Wiggins had 26 points apiece for Minnesota.

Celtics 112, Heat 93

In Boston, Jaylen Brown scored a season-high 31 points, Kemba Walker had 28 and the Celtics beat Miami to improve to 8-0 at home.

Brown connected on a season-high five 3-pointers, and Walker had seven assists and four rebounds. Jayson Tatum added 19 points.

Jimmy Butler led Miami with a season-high 37 points and had six rebounds and four assists. Heat coach Erik Spoelstra left the team in the morning, flying home to be with wife Nikki for the birth of their second son. Assistant coach Dan Craig ran the team.

Hornets 106, Warriors 91

In Charlotte, Devonte Graham made 10 3-pointers and scored 33 points and Charlotte beat Golden State to spoil D'Angelo Russell's return to the court.

Graham was 10 of 16 from beyond the arc and also had nine assists and had seven rebounds. Backcourt mate Terry Rozier added 25 points, seven assists and seven rebounds.

Russell finished with 18 points on 7-of-13 shooting in 25 minutes after missing the last nine games with a right thumb sprain.

Nets 130, Hawks 118

In Atlanta, Garrett Temple scored a season-high 27 points, Spencer Dinwiddie had 18 of his 24 in the second half and Brooklyn beat the Hawks.

Taurean Prince finished with 23 points against his former team, and Jarrett Allen had 20 for the Nets, who were coming off a three-point home loss Sunday to Miami but have won six of eight.

Kyrie Irving missed his 10th straight game with a right shoulder impingement and did not make the two-game trip to stay home and rehab.

Trae Young scored 39 points and rookie Cam Reddish had a career-high 25 for Atlanta. The Hawks have lost 11 of 12.

Trail Blazers 127, Kings 116

In Portland, CJ McCollum scored 33 points and the Trail Blazers pulled away in the final quarter to beat the Sacramento Kings.

Hassan Whiteside added 22 points and 16 rebounds, as well as a career-high seven assists. Damian Lillard had 24 points and 10 assists in Portland's third straight home victory. Carmelo Anthony finished with 20 points, his fourth game with 20 or more in seven games with the Blazers.

Richaun Holmes had 28 points and 10 rebounds for the Kings.

Magic 128, Suns 114

In Orlando, Aaron Gordon scored a season-high 32 points, Terrence Ross had 22 and Orlando beat Phoenix.

Evan Fournier added 21 points, and Markelle Fultz had 13 points, five assists and four rebounds for the Magic. Frank Kaminsky led the Suns with 23 points and five rebounds, and Devin Booker had 17 points and five assists.

Pacers 107, Thunder 100

In Oklahoma City, T.J. Warren scored 24 points to help Indiana beat the Thunder.

Domantas Sabonis added 17 points and 13 rebounds for the Pacers. They have won seven of eight.

Steven Adams scored 20 points on 8-for-8 shooting and Danilo Gallinari and Dennis Schroder each added 18 points for the Thunder.

Bulls 106, Grizzlies 99

In Chicago, Zach LaVine scored 25 points, Wendell Carter Jr. had 16 points and 13 rebounds and the Bulls held off Memphis.

Lauri Markkanen added 15 points for the Bulls.

Jonas Valanciunas had 32 points and 13 rebounds for Memphis.

Ibrahimovic fuels talk of Serie A return

MILAN—Sweden footballer Zlatan Ibrahimovic has fuelled speculation that he is set to return to Italy, where he has played for AC Milan, Inter Milan and Juventus, by saying in an interview: "see you soon in Italy".

The 38-year-old striker confirmed his departure from Los Angeles Galaxy last month following the club's elimination from the Major League Soccer playoffs.

"I'll join a club which must get back to winning, which must renew its history and is in search of a battle against everyone and everything," Ibrahimovic said. "That is the only way I'll be able to find the necessary motivation to surprise you again."

"It's not just about choosing a team, as there are other factors that need to line up, including in the interests of my family. I'll see you in Italy soon," he added.

According to reports in Italy, Ibrahimovic has been offered a six-month deal to come to the aid of struggling former giants AC Milan, who are 11th in the Serie A table.

Napoli are also a possible destination as last season's runners-up sit seventh, after a run of six league games without a win.

"I love to make the difference," he added. "I don't just want to do one or two things well, I want to do all of it."

Ibrahimovic played for two seasons between 2010 and 2012 with AC Milan, helping them to their last Serie A title, and scoring 42 goals in 61 league appearances.

He also won three league titles with Inter Milan, and two with Juventus, which were both revoked following the 'Calcio-poli' match-fixing scandal.

Meanwhile, American midfielder Tyler Adams is finally returning to training with RB Leipzig.

Adams, 20, played in 12 matches for the Bundesliga side last season, and Leipzig only lost two.

He'd missed USMNT duty at the Gold Cup as well as the entire RBL preseason with a groin problem, as well as Leipzig's first three months.

In his absence, the club is a point off the league lead and has already advanced to the knockout rounds of the UEFA Champions League under new coach Julian Nagelsmann.

No time for talk, Cowboys need to beat Bears

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP)—Dak Prescott saw no need for strong words or fiery speeches.

The Dallas Cowboys have lost six of nine since a 3-0 start, and all their star quarterback cares about is finding a way to win consistently again.

They will try to get headed back in the right direction when they visit the Chicago Bears on Thursday night in a matchup between disappointing 6-6 teams that made the playoffs last season.

"Talk is cheap right? We've talked a lot," Prescott said. "We've talked a bunch and got ourselves right to where we are. In a moment like this I say hell with the talking and I'm going to do more. I'm going to work harder and if you're a young guy looking for somebody to figure it out, how to do it, yeah, look at me and some of these other guys because that's exactly what we're doing—putting our head down focusing and doubling down on ourselves."

The Cowboys came into the season with high expectations after winning the NFC East, and they looked like they were ready to deliver in the early going. Dallas averaged 32 points and 481 yards in its first 3-0 start since 2008, winning each of those games by at least 10 points. But in recent weeks, the team with the NFL's leading passer and No. 1 offense is having trouble scoring.

The Cowboys were kept out of the end zone in a 13-9 loss at New England two weeks ago, then managed two touchdowns in falling 26-15 to Buffalo on Thanksgiving. Despite all that, they still hold a one-game lead over Philadelphia in the division. But they will be facing a top 10 defense for the third straight week when they meet Khalil Mack and the Bears.

Chicago has won three of four after losing four in a row, though two of those victories were against the Lions and the other was over the Giants.

Detroit and New York are a combined 5-18-1, and the Lions started backup quarterbacks Jeff Driskel and David Blough with Matthew Stafford injured.

"It speaks to the direction of where we could've went in that four-game slide," Bears coach Matt Nagy said. "I thought it revealed a lot of who we were as a team and who we are as people. No one not one time started pointing fingers. ... That's a credit to our players for battling through that. It makes you proud to be their coach."

Amari Cooper's strong production since joining the Cowboys in a midseason trade last year hasn't translated on the road in his first full season with Dallas. The receiver has 47 catches, 758 yards and five touchdowns in six home games, and 17 catches for 213 yards and two scores on the road.

For Cooper, the more important numbers are 60 and 32.

That's the difference in targets between home and road games. Cooper isn't one to complain, and isn't doing so by pointing out those numbers.

"It's just like basketball," said Cooper, who is still fifth in the league in yards receiving (971) and tied for fifth in TD catches (seven). "You shoot the ball more, you're going to have more points. If you only have two shots, then you only score four points."

Bears quarterback Mitchell Trubisky is on a bit of a roll the past four games after struggling for most of the season. He was 29 of 38 for a season-high 338 yards with three touchdowns—one in the closing minutes—to lead the Bears to a 24-20 win at Detroit on Thanksgiving. Trubisky is 94 of 145 for 979 yards, eight touchdowns, four interceptions and a 91.1 rating in the past four games. The three wins came against last-place teams, and he will be going against a top 10 defense this week.

The Cowboys finally brought in kickers for try-outs after Brett Maher had two big misses in the loss to Buffalo, pushing his NFL-leading total to nine misses. Dallas decided against signing a replacement, for now.

Maher has been one of the most interesting riddles in a season full of them for the Cowboys. He's the only kicker in NFL history with three kicks of at least 60 yards -- all three from at least 62. But he has the second-lowest success rate from 30-49 yards at 55% (6 of 11).

Veteran Spanish pro Edgar Nohales Nieto will be tested tomorrow when he competes in the 12th Hell of the Marianas Century Cycle Race.

Nieto has been joining tournaments across Asia for a decade, but this will be his first time to participate in Saipan's premier bike race—a 100-kilometer tour around the scenic spots on the island.

The 33-year-old has a long list of races and made impressive finishes in several of them, notably the 2017 Tour de Flores—a multi-day cycling event in the Indonesian's island. He ruled the mountain classification of the race and topped the Stage 4 (170K) of the Union Cycliste Internationale Asia Tour-sanctioned tournament after timing in at 4:47:29.

Besides the Tour de Flores,
